NEIGHBORS DISPUTE OVER LAND; ALLEN FATALLY WOUNDED

Morgan Castle in Jail Here, Held As Slayer of Gurgles, Allen

PRISONER RETIRED

A dispute over a small strip of land resulted in the death Friday of Gurgles Allen, 32 years old, well-known Middle Creek man.

His neighbor, Morgan Castle, 36, in the county jail here, held as the alleged slayer of Allen, charged of a shotgun said to have been fired by Castle into Allen's leg and resultant loss of blood caused Allen's death. The shooting took place Friday morning, and the wounded man succumbed at the Beaver Valley hospital Friday night. Castle and Allen disputed over a fence separating their farms. The wounded man is said to have been retreating after Castle shot an ax and he took. Allen, a one-armed man, wrestled the ax from the other, and Castle went home and got a shotgun. This statement continues, returning, he fired at close range, the charge taking effect in Allen's leg above the knee. The only witness, however, is Castle. It is said, and he refused to make a statement when arraigned in the County Judge's office. Castle came to the county jail here Saturday and confessed regarding that he had been "accused" of killing a man. He is being held without bond to the grand jury which convenes here Monday.

Surviving the victim are his widow, Mrs. Ella Howard Allen, and nine children: Claude and Clyde, teachers in the county school; Jarvis, James, Carl, Yelva Jewell Viola and Violet. He also leaves two brothers and two sisters. Burial will be held at Prestonsburg, Ky., Friday morning, at 11 o'clock, in the Greenup county and Dave Allen, Gallitonia, O.

FUNDS AVAILABLE FOR REFORESTATION

And for Soil Erosion Work Through AAA Substitute Measure, May Write

Funds for reforestation and the prevention of soil erosion are available as a result of a provision in the substitute bill for the AAA, Congressman A. J. May this week wrote Dr. O. W. Thompson, president of the Pike County Fish and Game Association. At the same time Congressman May urged immediate action on the part of the fish and game organization, civic clubs and citizens throughout the Big Sandy valley so that this section may profit from this type of governmental aid.

The recent substitute bill for the Triple A relating to agriculture, contains a provision authorizing the department to make allotment of funds for reforestation and prevention of soil erosion, which is beneficial of vital concern to the Big Sandy and Kentucky river valleys.

"As you know, our reforestation for the last several years in the Big Sandy valley has been going backward in other words, a strip of land about a fourth of the original river bed of the Big Sandy river on each side of the stream has been taken by timber growth until the river channel is now only about half what it was 20 years ago. This narrowing of the capacity of the channel to carry the flow of water down to about half its former capacity. At the same time, the woodman's ax has continued to ring on the mountainside and the slopes that lead the flow of water from falling rains directly into the much restricted channel. Consequently we have two problems. The first is the problem of how to prevent soil erosion and the second is the problem of how to prevent soil erosion."

"I am sure you realize the importance of this matter and I am counting on a hundred percent cooperation from your organization, and devoutly hope that you will start a campaign immediately through benefit drives, effective organization work to accomplish this purpose."

UNIQUE LISTENING CENTER AT CANEY

An experimental portable radio listening center, the first of its kind in America, has been established by the University of Kentucky in the "mountain" area of the state. It has been announced. This unique center will be under the immediate supervision of officials of Caney Junior College, Pigeon Gap. About 200 will be taken to the spot, isolated mountain homes to be left for several days at a time. Since 1923 the University of Kentucky has been steadily building up its system of radio listening centers in Eastern Kentucky. About a score of these centers are now in operation under the supervision of community directors, school principals and others.

The new type center will serve the mountain homes whose inhabitants by reason of infirmity, illness or bad climatic conditions are unable to reach the regularly established centers.

The equipment being sent to Pigeon Gap consists of a small box about a foot and one-half square, which contains the set, built-in aerial, tubes, loud speaker and miniature batteries. The entire outfit can be carried by one man as easily as he could transport a suitcase.

If the experiment in East county proves worthwhile, additional portable listening centers will be provided for other parts of Eastern Kentucky.

Let Age and Youth Agree to Differ: A Form of Agreement

Conclusion of Sage on the Problem of Life's Contrasts.

One of the most serious of life's contrasts is the continual misunderstanding which arises between old age and youth. It is true that from time immemorial age has been dissatisfied with youth and youth has resented the impatience of old age. But we must be fair to both sides. The young people of today, nevertheless, are not only more intelligent, more experienced, more venturesome and more resourceful than their parents were just as anxious now could be. To us, their children, the problems of this perplexing age seem intricate. In comparison, I. L. S. thought it out in this fashion: Let them (age and youth) agree to differ, for who knows but what agreeing to differ may not be a form of agreement, rather, than a form of difference?

"Why, for a starter, Miss Cook, will they stand in their own juice for a few days? Will they stand to soften their heads by mutual aid? No bedding and a diet of saltless meat will help those three plier jacks to consider the desirability of that five thousand dollar reward I offered for their boss."

"Not all of it, but I know that," she said. "I told you before that Huxley is only a commonplace wolf in sheep's clothing. He will stay in here and eat and enjoy their tea and sugar while your learning to use your wits."

By noon the next day Lillith's Eskimo suit was finished. Her ankle, though weak, was no longer sore or swollen. The work of the week, Sir Edmund Gosse in writing his "Father and Son," endured severe criticism because he said too much after, besides he said too little. He was trying to present the influence of a strictly puritanical father upon a young man whose attitude toward life had changed. Sir Gosse's comment upon the book helped to smooth over the harshness of such criticism when he said that it was a very delicate task, very delicately done. Publishers, as well as magazines, and almost two epochs.

It seems to me that Mr. Brockwell in his "Standards," has found the line between the lack of harmony between the two generations when he says that youth fails to consider how much they owe to the old. The old, in turn, are more than their own, how much more irksome it is to arrange their contents, and that, in conjunction with the proverbial of youth, is the whole cause of the difficulties that arise. A case in point in the talk between the aged Belarus and the two sons of Cymbeline before they learn of their princely heritage. Belarus tells at length about the charms of mountain life in Wales, adding that it is nobler than attending for a check, richer than doing nothing for a bushel, prouder than rustling in unpaid silk. They listen respectfully and reply:

"Happy the life is best, sweetest that have a sharper knife, well-contrived. With your stiff cap, put use as it is a sign of insurance, traveling sheets. What should we speak of when we are as old as you?" when I shall have the rain and wind beat dead December, how in this, our pinching age, shall we discuss? The freezing hours aside? We have seen nothing."

How hard it is to hide the sparks of nature, says Belarus to himself! M. O. W., in Indianapolis News.

Midway to the stream canoe he stopped where, through separate views, he could see both places: The gray dawn had brightened enough to make them visible at a distance. He sat down on a log to wait. In a few minutes the cold was again bitter. A look at the coastable in the distance showed it to be fully loaded. He took off the belt and buckled on again up under the loose fullness of his pants. Huddled between the charter skin and the rabbit-fur undercoat, the oil in the pilot's mechanism would become warm. Cold oil is apt to jam a gun.

After making sure of the pistol, he had nothing to do except give his face an occasional rub to prevent frost-bite. He sat restfully relaxed, as silent as an Indian hunter beside a seal hole. Very slowly the gray dawn brightened. It was almost as mellow as a pale moon.

From across the lake came the crack of rifles—three shots in quick succession.—Garth told himself that Huxley or his men were making a trail. He hurriedly went. The engineer planned to cover the shattered ends of the three-seater plane's seats with raw hide.

The sun glared over the rugged barren mountains into the frost-pricked valley. Quite a white lake, Garth saw east of his four scattered camps at the trees near the lake shore, on the far side of the frozen glacier slope. The man carried a big folded hide on his left shoulder.

A about turned the man's steps up towards the ford. Other abouts came from the slope above the ford. It was as he had foreseen. In coming to repair the hosts of the three-seater plane, Huxley and his men had found that the snow-covered timberline and searched the spruce woods.

But the hunters had found no trace of the quarry all the way to the bank of the frozen glacier stream. There, however, the snow-covered tracks coming down from the timberline followed the man with the moosehide.

When the plane the engineer stopped for the night, they were with him. They approached the stranded aircraft warily, with rifles ready, ready to shoot. When nothing happened, Huxley stepped to his companion to drop the hide and climb aboard. As the man obeyed, a number of the miners came running down the trail, followed by the man with the moosehide.

When nothing happened, Huxley stepped to his companion to drop the hide and climb aboard. As the man obeyed, a number of the miners came running down the trail, followed by the man with the moosehide.

he tossed coals from the fire into the base of the stack. The wood soon blazed up in several places. With the foursack pack and the box of primings along over his shoulder, he went down. Garth lugged the sack across the open space and past the stunted spruce and the willows. Constable Dillon had been murdered. In a drift on the north side of the next tree, he dug a hole, dropped in the sack of alloy, and covered it over.

A backward look at the camp showed the bonfire flaming high. At any moment the frozen dynamite was apt to blow to pieces. From east to west, he left came angry shouts. The direction of Garth's trail had at last warned the pursuers of his raid on their camp. They were sending for it as fast as they could flounder through the drifts.

Instead of circling to double past them again, Garth started off down-slope towards the west side of the lake. There was no need to warn them about the dynamite. Before he had taken a dozen steps, the frosty air was filled with the rattling of rifle bullets. He bent forward and went pounding downhill through the soft snow as if bearing a trail for a fast driver dog team.

When he reached the border of the muskies he glimpsed a gray shape in the center of a flock of willows. He could talk to a large. The man had been first of the fish eaten to find what was left of the newly killed muskie.

Close looking and listening showed that the cub of the great bear was not with her. Garth went straight towards the homely looking bear until she caught his scent. She reared up to gaze her bloody jaws and roared as she had roared at him and Huxley.

Garth very quietly turned to the left and angled away from her. He was the two-legged creature who had several times shifted respectably around her and her cubs during the summer. She watched him go; then returned to her angry growling.

He started along the border of the musky to where a narrow neck of the swamp extended up a little valley to a gulch in the side of the west mountain.

At the far bank he shifted slightly and crouched down behind a clump of willows. He did not have long to wait. Enraged by the destruction of their food and camp outfit and the taking of the platinum alloy, Huxley and his men must have fought fast down the trail of their betrayer.

From over across the corner of the musky came the warning roar of the disgraced grizzly. A quick shot followed. Close upon the report came an outbreak of terrific snarling, roars and a whole fusillade of shot. The report suddenly ceased. But the firing kept up for four or five seconds.

"Scared, warning cartridges," Garth told himself. "Hoping and at me and stop that, firing by the charge. Hope she didn't get any of them."

His wish was soon fulfilled. All four trappers came plotting along the border of the musky. Huxley was in the lead. But the bearded man next behind showed forward beside him as if he came striding out on the bog. Took trunks could be brought and shoved out to them. Set on niggerheads, the poles gave support for the trapped men to pull themselves up out of the treacherously slicking quicksand. Other poles made a bridge for them, back to solid ground. But the bearded miner left his rifle down in the snow.

"Garth chuckled and looked to see if Huxley backed with his men. Instead, the engineer headed up the bog valley towards the gulch. That added to Garth's wrath. By a quick return, the hunters could have stripped off the grizzly's hide before it froze. They were walking away from a rug that would have gone far towards replacing their burnt blankets. He had so tantalized and snarred them that a few days might be lost to them.

To add insult to injury, he tracked a heavy trail up into a spruce thicket and built a small fire. Besides the fire, he scattered a handful of dried apricots and prunes. After that he skirted along the edge of the musky to his north end.

Here he came to where in ancient times, before it started to recede, the glacier had piled a big terminal moraine. This was the immense natural wall that had kept the lake shut out. Among the rocks of the rapids, on the slope of the lower valley below the falls, Garth made out the wreckage of Mr. Ramiil's custom-built moose-plane.

He worked his way down alongside the rapids to look closer at the wreck. Here he found a trail of tracks. The tattered cover of one broken wing thrust up out of the white water with its ratchet from the bank.

Garth started out a small sliver of ice. He quenched it with damp moss, and used the charred stick ends to write on the wing fabric.

REWARD FOR W. HUXLEY and "MURDERER."

"MURDERER."

Vivian Garth shall be tried and hung for murder." She gasped: "You—hung! But he has all those men to help him. You're alone—worthless alone. I'm only a girl."

He smiled banteringly. "Well, I wouldn't say that. A handy cook isn't a nuisance. The pot is beginning to simmer. You might drop in a pinch of tea. How's your ankle, 'dave so much better. I've exercised it a little every time I went outside. And I've half finished my plum side. But how—" she interrupted herself—"can you win if you don't kill them?"

"Why, for a starter, Miss Cook, will they stand in their own juice for a few days? Will they stand to soften their heads by mutual aid? No bedding and a diet of saltless meat will help those three plier jacks to consider the desirability of that five thousand dollar reward I offered for their boss."

CHAPTER XI

Removal of the Specie. Shortly before noon, the four trappers started on the morning. The man who had not been hooded led the way down. Another miser followed, then Huxley. The man who had lost his hide lagged behind. The two leaders reached the broken mooseplane wing. Garth saw them read the writing.

Huxley jumped down beside the miners, to stare at the offer of reward that branded him for what he was. With a curse, he ripped the tattered piece of fabric from the wing frame and flung it down into the foaming rapid.

The two men glanced furtively at each other. Huxley pointed to the trail on the opposite bank and signed for them to lead the way across. Huxley smiled. The first man cursed, and shouted his refusal.

"Jump them boulders? I ain't no 'fry. I'm through trailing that dirt."

"Me too," declared the second man. "I won't break my neck for nobody."

A second look at the crossing forced Huxley to shout his agreement: "Curse the little! We'll chase back. I'll be on ground to our left. That's where he must turn. He'll both of his disabled companions."

Along with the angry statement, the engineer signed for his partners to start the back ahead of him. Garth smiled. The two who had seen that offer of reward would not forget it, and Huxley was keenly aware of the fact.

When all four disappeared up on the moraine, Garth recrossed the boulder. There was no sign of Lillith when he came down from the moraine. He called into the entrance tunnel. Back came a quivering cry of relief. A quick crawl took him to the low narrow passage.

Lillith was breathing hard, almost gasping. "Oh!—oh!—thank God!—I looked and looked, but I could not see you. I thought you must be lying there—like that poor policeman—dead!"

"Hardly. Look here—and here." He showed the pistol, then damped his foursack pack. "How about salt on your meat, and a cup of tea with sugar?"

"Alan!" she cried. "You made them give you all that?"

"In a way—yes. Set a pot of snow on the lamp stove, and slice some meat."

Lillith gazed at him in speechless wonderment, her blue eyes wide and very lustrous. He pretended not to see her, and started to eat his first hot fat-carbon steak that she served him on one of the looted tin plates.

But after he had told about the bear scare and the luring of the men into the bog, her surprise found utterance.

"Why didn't you kill the beasts while you had the chance?"

Garth answered with sudden gravity. "For several reasons. First, the main reason was because I was not a killer and because I intend that

Mexico's Calendar Stone Carved by Aztec Indians

Among the sights of Mexico City is a piece of volcanic rock on a museum in Mexico City. On its surface carved a great circular figure in the shape of the sun; and the width of the figure is 12 feet.

The stone is composed of volcanic rock, and weighs 20 tons as it exists today. The rock appears to have been placed there by the Aztecs, several centuries before the carving was done, the block weighed from 40 to 50 tons.

It may be that the block was cut down before it was moved from the place where it was quarried. It was too heavy for people to lift. There were no oxen or other large beasts of burden at the center before the white man came, so it must have been moved with the help of rollers.

At the center of the Calendar stone is a circular block of the sun and moon, with the rest of the carving, it tells the Aztecs that of the world's history.

The Aztec declared that four suns had existed before the one they saw in the sky. The first sun was supposed to have been destroyed by a jaguar, the second by a whirlwind, the third by a rain of fire, and the fourth by a flood. It was believed that the world would be destroyed by an earthquake.

MAYTOWN

PLAY, APRIL 3 "Deestreck Skule" play is scheduled for Friday, April 3, under the auspices of the P. T. A. and Woman's Club.

WOMAN'S CLUB MEETS The Woman's Club held its annual business meeting Friday at the school and elected the following officers: president, Mrs. Arb Hayes; vice-president, Mrs. N. C. Bourbonton; secretary, Mrs. Stanley Combs; treasurer, Mrs. John May. A vote of thanks was voted the outgoing officers, especially Mrs. Frank May, whose work as president has been outstanding.

The club voted to sponsor a county faculty banquet in the lunch-room Friday, May 1, at 8 p. m., invitations being sent this week to the large schools only since seating capacity cannot permit all Floyd teachers to attend. Proceeds will go to the club's independent scholarship fund recently established. The fund will be loaned to Charlie Patton this year. Following the banquet, the visitors will be privileged to address the school play under the direction of Mrs. Combs.

The club takes this means of thanking the Maytown people for their splendid response to the call for dishes for lunch room. Fifty-two sets have been purchased to date. Some members of the committee have not reported. We expect to raise funds for the entire 100 sets and hope to secure glass and silver shortly.

Friday afternoon, the club agreed to try buying everything for entertainments hereafter, not asking for donations, merely taking the profits into the treasury. It is hoped this will induce many women to join and work with us for the good of the community with membership costing them only one dollar dues annually.

The club wishes to assist in sponsoring the community library and playground for the summer and will render service gratis along this line, hoping the Youth Movement can supply supervision.

They were planned on the school campus recently, also some dogwoods in the yards, and a nice assortment of anoles were planted in the foundation planting of the school campus.

Health News

HEALTH NEWS—HEARD UP
Health Department

By Act and Village Health Board... the Kentucky General Assembly... power is given the State Board of Health to make ruling, and regulation regarding the handling of foods and the protection of the health of the general public of the state of Kentucky. One of these ruling is that each and every worker in any and all food handling establishments must be free of any communicable diseases that he or she might transmit to the general public in the handling of foods. We as workers for the protection of the general public of the county of Floyd, have been for the past several months been trying to see that each employe in food handling establishments such as restaurants, hotels and soda fountains, get a health examination which will cattle them for any communicable disease. We feel this measure is of vital importance and believe that the public is behind us in seeing that this is done.

In view of the fact that only a small part of the restaurant workers and food handlers have complied with this measure, it is coming to the point that stricter measure are going to have to be followed. The next step will be to advise the owner of each restaurant, hotel or soda fountain to abate the operation of such health nuisances, caused by the employing of food handlers who do not have permits. In this notice he will be given a certain length of time to get rid of all employes who do not have said permit and after this time has expired and he has failed to comply with the notice, he will be proceeded against according to the Kentucky statute, which provides that a person who operates a nuisance after he has been duly notified to abate same shall, upon conviction of said charge, be fined not less than $10 nor more than $100 for each offense and each and every day shall be considered a separate offense.

Should the proprietors of such places not be glad to co-operate with health officials, on such matters, it is necessary to resort to such drastic measures as, abrogated and that each worker, as well as the proprietors of all food handling establishments, will realize this vital importance and give an one hundred per cent co-operation.

The city of Prestonsburg, realizing the importance of having their food handlers pass health examinations have passed an ordinance making this ruling even more strict than ever. They are requiring that all restaurant, hotel and soda fountain proprietors have a health examination once each six months and that all employe help have an examination each 30 days. In accordance with this ordinance, the third Thursday in each month, the next will be health examination day for restaurant workers. The third Thursday in April will be the beginning of this work. After this date no restaurant owner will be expected to be operating without a health certificate, and he or she be expected to work any person, even for one day, without they have a food handlers permit. We speak of restaurants here more often because they are the most common of the food handling establishments, but it is to be understood that this ordinance applies to hotel, and soda fountains as well.

Blank for these examinations will be furnished by the health department. If you desire to have your examination made by some other doctor, you may arrange with the health department and go to any doctor you wish. The only requirement is that he be a licensed physician.

Just as this thing, are left to the judgment of the examiner, the health department is very strict in these examinations, otherwise you may be of little value. You have the co-operation of all restaurant owners, keepers and shoofer and a real service will have been rendered to us. We feel that each and every worker should be made if there be the slightest indication and that in most all cases blood test should be made.

NO "SOUND EFFECTS" WITH ELECTROLUX, THANK GOODNESS!

SILENCE is more than a comfort... IT'S A PROMISE OF LASTING EFFICIENCY

Thanks to the utterly different way it operates—without machinery, without noise—only Electrolux can bring you all these big, long-lived advantages:

- NO MOVING PARTS TO WEAR
- LASTING EFFICIENCY
- FULLEST FOOD PROTECTION
- SAVINGS THAT PAY FOR IT
- CONTINUED LOW OPERATING COST

LISTEN! But you'll hear no noise from the operation of Electrolux! A tiny gas burner takes the place of all moving parts in this permanently silent refrigerator. This simple, more efficient way of refrigeration is the reason why more than half a million American families have already chosen Electrolux... why more and more families are choosing it every year!

For Electrolux insures an unusually low operating cost... and this cost will never be increased through the inefficiency of moving, wearing parts. What's more, you can count on a minimum of repairs with Electrolux... for parts that do not move cannot wear.

And Electrolux brings you other savings! It provides constant food-preserving temperatures 24 hours a day, plenty of ice cubes. Owners report that Electrolux actually saves enough on food bills and on running cost to pay for itself. See Electrolux on display at our showrooms. The new 1938 models are more convenient, more beautiful than ever. And they bring you all these famous operating advantages that make Electrolux the most economical refrigerator any family can own. Come in!

More Years, More Cares Monkeys and Yellow Fever The King Sees Poverty Ancient Korea Found

The French have a saying, referring to a man's age, "One year more, Un an de plus, un coin de pins."

Europeans nations might take for their motto, "One treaty more, one more danger of war."

Italy, Austria, Hungary have a European and under which Italy guarantees Austria's independence against any attempt by Germany to absorb Austria.

So Paulo, Brazil, worries about reports brought by health officers from the forests of the upper São Paulo area.

Fortunately for Brazil cities, the jungle mosquito that bites monkeys and gives them yellow fever beds away from cities.

Edward VIII, now king of England, visited the magnificent luxuriant ocean steamer Queen Mary in Glasgow, then went from house to house, knocking on doors, visiting some of the worst slum dwellings in all his kingdom.

King, talking to Lord Melchett, the latter put the problem of England, this country and the whole world in these few words:

"How do you reconcile a world that has produced this mighty ship with the slums we have just visited?"

A marvelously illustrated ancient man, found in a shop of an antiquity dealer of Cairo, Egypt, was bought for fifty pounds.

There is plenty of money in this country, billions of it, Jesse Jones will tell you. He is not circulating, as unhealthily for money in a country for blood in your veins.

what Irvin Cobb thinks about:

A Bride for King Edward BEVERLY HILLS, CALIF.

According to tradition—of maybe its law—King Edward is limited in the choice of a bride to one of five European princesses.

Indeed, he might go further and fare no worse by taking for his queen a well-bred Canadian girl. Still, this would severely check a certain type of Britisher who always refers to a Canadian as a "wee-bankee" with a lower case "w" or, how about a maiden from a quarter which, like Canada, produces some of the loveliest women in the world—the Annapolis? By the way, does that name remind of Insular Englishman call a native of those parts an "Antipathy"? Probably so.

Hamlet and Hamlet The papers say a peasant shepherd in Denmark broke up a Shakespearean performance because it wasn't funny. Well, could he but watch some of the Hamlets I've watched, they'd do likewise.

Likewise, if those riotous peasants really have a sense of humor they'd get a stripe out of a certain not altogether happy period of classical screen production, never realizing, of course, that they were laughing at an epic.

One thing, though, we can do as spectators in these parts and that's putting on a ballyhoo. That gigantic flaming meteor which scared folks along the eastern coast wouldn't have caused a ripple out here. We'd just think somebody was opening a new lunch stand over on Hollywood boulevard.

Florida Versus Roper I DO so wish the Tommy Manlyites would make up their mind, one way or the other, so we could all concentrate on those plaintive tapping sounds emanating from the cabinet at Washington.

Dame Rumor hath it that it's Uncle Dan Roper signaling faintly for help because somebody in the administration is trying to match his playthings from him. Now Uncle Dan is a patient soul and a true southern gentleman, not for worlds would he antagonize a good Democrat, much less a lady Democrat. But they do say he harbors a secret gnawing grievance.

As the report differs, you're not sure he doesn't mind Miss Perkins taking her own job so seriously, but does object to her trying, with equal earnestness, to take his.

It may be only a base Republican slander. Still, say what you will, Miss Perkins has got a mighty determined jaw.

Reading 5,000,000 Telegrams WHILE it may have been sort of rare-free for Senator Brier's committee to seize those musty mountains of private telegraph-messages, why invoke the law to do so? Surely anybody who deliberately sits down to write through 5,000,000 state telegrams has been pushing his luck and will suffer from polka in the pot before he's through. Think of the wires a fellow gets on birthdays and holidays. Some of them aren't so good even when fresh, are they?

Apparently the present investigation aims to find out whether any lobbying has actually gone on in Washington—and indeed there has been a suspicion that that effect for quite some time.

SALYERSVILLE FIRE DAMAGE IS $30,000

INSURANCE COVERS ONLY $4,000 OF LOSS IN BLAZE WHICH WIPES OUT BLOCK

(From Salyersville Independent) Fire early Thursday morning made eight families of Salyersville homeless, and destroyed four business establishments, Dr. Hall's office, and damaged the Salyersville National Bank building. Total loss is estimated at between twenty-five and thirty thousand dollars, of which possibly four thousand is covered by insurance.

The largest individual loss was the jewelry and hardware store of H. W. Museum, located in the Green Carpenter building on the corner of Main and Church streets. The stock of goods in this store was estimated at between ten and twenty thousand dollars. Only a few hundred dollars worth of goods were saved and there was no insurance on the building or the contents.

Two liquor stores, that of Myrtle Arnett, and that of Elmer and John Howard, were destroyed, as was the shoe repair shop of Henry Patrick, and the jewelry and printing shop of Dale Sublett.

The fire was discovered about 4:30 a. m. and had gained too much headway to be extinguished when the fire hose was turned on about a half hour later. After consuming the Green Carpenter and Dale Sublett buildings of Main street, the flames leaped Church street and caught into the upper story of the Carpenter building back of the Salyersville National Bank in which was located the Howard liquor store and restaurant. A string of one-story frame shacks on Church street between the bank and the Christian Church next burned to the ground, by which time the two grocery business, and Warren Adams barber shop, across the street, were blazing merrily.

The flames were extinguished by 10 a. m. after heroic efforts by volunteer firemen. During the conflagration, the insulation on electric wires became heated, causing short circuits, and the current was turned off. This affected the pumps at the water plant, and reduced pressure on the fire hose. Gas was also turned off for a period of about two hours.

A list of the homeless, together with the business houses and probable damage to each follow:

- Warren Adams, barber shop equipment, $300.
- Evelyn Baley, canned goods, and damage, $50.
- Jim Bailey, furniture and clothing, $300.

FATHER OF FLOYD RESIDENTS, DEAD

(From Paintsville News)
J. W. "To h" Daniel, 75 years old, died Thursday at his home on Greasy Creek about three miles from Boone Camp post-office, after an illness of several weeks.

He suffered an attack of influenza about a month ago, and other ailments combined to cause his death. His wife, Matilda Preston Daniel, is also confined to her bed with influenza and asthma.

Mr. Daniel was for many years a merchant on Greasy Creek and had lived at that place for about 20 years. He moved to Two Mile about 1911 and operated a store at the forks of Two Mile with his father-in-law, G. L. Preston, for about two years. He sold out in 1918 to W. B. Mearns and returned to his old home on Greasy.

Mr. Daniel had been married twice. His first wife was Miss Nan Ward. Of this union five children were born, four of whom are still living. They are Lora and Harry Daniel and Betty Layne; Mrs. Minty Daniel and Mrs. Sarah Reed, of Boone's Camp. The other, a son, Charlie Daniel, died several years ago.

Mr. Daniel's present wife was Miss Matilda Preston, daughter of the late G. L. Preston of Williamson. Besides his wife, three children who survive are Mrs. Callie Collins and Mrs. Maxine Dennison, of Odgas; Norman, Ora, Lefe; John Orville and Bert, of Boone's Camp, and Stella Mae Lackey, of Welesbar.

Mr. Daniel was a brother of James Daniel, of Tom's Creek, and was an uncle of David Daniel, of Paint Mills, an employe of the Paintsville post-office. He also was a brother-in-law of Charles Preston, of Fifth street.

Funeral rites, were held Sunday by Leonard Arrowood and L. T. Preston, with burial in the family cemetery near the Daniels home.

Senator Joe P. Tackett returned Monday to Frankfort after spending the week-end here with his family.
