Sheriff says outdated system to blame :

Money woes cause layoffs

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

A reduction in cash flow has resulted in layoffs in the Floyd County Sheriff's Department which Sheriff Paul Hunt Thompson says is not uncommon in county sheriff's offices.

An outdated system used to run a sheriff's office, coupled with "guess work" are some of the reasons, Thompson said, for the current budget crunch.

"The way this department is setup, sheriff's have a zero bank balance on January 1 each year," Thompson said. "Then, you have to borrow money from the state based on what you project it will take to operate the office until tax collections start. The sheriff's department setup doesn't make much sense to me."

Thompson has laid off six full-time and one part-time employees; rearranged job duties to be shared by full-time deputies; and is trying to take up some of the slack himself. The sheriff said it will be difficult to provide the county services outside of the office.

"It's going to hurt," Thompson said Tuesday. "For two nights last week, I was the only one out working. I have obligated myself, personally, for a $12,000 loan to meet the payroll. I can't afford to go in debt any further. So, rather than borrow any more money and try to repay it, I have to cut expenses to the bone for the next two months until the cash flow is caught up."

Thompson said that over $30,000 is owed to the department from a Drug Abuse Resistance Education (D.A.R.E.) grant and from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers for Dewey Lake security patrols. Getting the money is a matter of processing the necessary paperwork.

"It's not anyone's fault," Thompson said. "We are owed about $18,000 from the D.A.R.E. grant to reimburse the sheriff's department for salaries and supplies we've already paid for. Money for lake security from the Corps of Engineers for lake security usually runs 30-40 days behind."

One of the major problems, Thompson said, is that a sheriff's department doesn't have an exact amount of money to be budgeted for operating expenses. Sheriff's departments operate on a calendar year basis, instead of on a fiscal year as does other county offices. Each year the department must submit to the state a year in advance on a month-to-month basis an estimate of expenditures and revenues for the office.

If expenditures exceed projected revenues, that amount must be advanced to the department and will be repaid to the state by the department

Filing heavy in last days :

November hopefuls flock to clerk's office

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Candidates flocked to the Floyd County Clerk's office Monday and Tuesday to beat the filing deadline for November's general election.

Also Tuesday, no petition was filed by Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo to put the question to Floyd County voters whether to move the county seat out of Prestonsburg. For the last several months, fiscal court members have discussed putting the issue on the November ballot.

The hottest races for November appear to be for the mayor and council members of Prestonsburg and commissioners and mayor of Wheelwright.

Only one new name emerged Tuesday for the Prestonsburg mayor's race. Paul Joseph joins early bid candidates current city councilmen George P. Archer, Jerry Fannin and Mike Vance. The three councilmen threw their hats into the ring earlier this year.

In the council race, 17 candidates filed for the eight seats including two sitting councilmen.

Incumbents Billy Ray Collins and Danny Hamilton will vie to keep their council seats with Stephen Thoe Allen, Phillip "Rusty" Chaffins, Harold G. Ratliff, Ralph B. Davis Jr., Curtis Risner, Paula Goble, John

Allen Jr., James R. Polk, Carol Jean Neely, William Chalmers Frazer, Allen Lafferty, Estelle Lee Carter, C. Richard Clark, Ous Hansel Cooley and Robert R. Allen II.

In the Wheelwright City race, four candidates filed for a chance to upset incumbent mayor Kenneth Johnson. Commissioner Lowell Parker, David Marlee Sammons, W.R. Bookie Hall and David "Dabo" Boyd will challenge Johnson in the November 2 election.

Three Wheelwright Commissioners filed to keep their posts, Andy Wayne Akers, Luther Johnson Jr. and Allen Taylor. Other candidates for the four commissioner seats are Charles L. Harmon, David Hall, Carolyn McCray, George Branham, Martha Simmons, Paul R. Preston and Charles Johnson.

In the two school board races this fall, District Three Board Member Brent Clark faces no opposition this fall.

In the District Two Race, newly-appointed board member Bob Isaac will face former school superintendent Ray Brackett and Wanda Huggins Brown.

Other filings:
• Mayor of Wayland: Eugene Mullins and Betty Sue Mulkey.
• Wayland City Council, vote for four: Curtis Tufis, Tommy Murphy

Plant set to grow

RND Design Inc. President Ralph Bowen met with county officials over the weekend to finalize plans to relocate his Chula Vista, California-based light manufacturing plant to the old United Supply building at Martin. The plant is expected to be in place by September 1 and initially employ 150 people, growing to employ at least 300 within its first three years of operation. (photo by Geoff Belcher)

The effort to bring a multi-million dollar manufacturing plant to Floyd County entered its final stages Tuesday as RND Design Inc. officials approved terms to settle the company's operations at Martin.

Darrell Gilliam, executive director of the Floyd County Development Authority, said Tuesday that county officials and RND President Ralph Bowen reached a memorandum of understanding concerning the company's relocation from Chula Vista, California to the old United Supply Building near Warco.

Bowen and Floyd Bush, RND's manager of manufacturing, met at the proposed site Saturday with Gilliam, Floyd County Judge-Executive John M. Stumbo, Floyd County Attorney Jim Hammond, Development Authority Chairman Burl Wells Spurlock, magistrates Gerald DeRossett and Jackie Edford Owens and other county officials to tour the facility and finalize plans for the relocation.

RND Design, which manufactures

low voltage outdoor lighting, is expected to move to the Martin site by September 1 and initially employ around 150 people, growing to employ at least 300 laborers within its first three years of operation.

Total relocation and start-up costs for the project are expected to exceed $1,675,500. Under the terms of the agreement, the county will utilize a $492,500 Community Development Block Grant to purchase the building and surrounding property, purchase inventory and to pay the costs of administering the grant; RND will invest an estimated $890,000; and the remainder is expected to be provided through a grant from the Big Sandy Revolving Loan fund, which is expected to contribute $75,000.

The success of the project, Gilliam said, hinges now on the final approval of the plan by the Kentucky Rural Economic Development Authority, which is expected to vote on the matter Tuesday, August 17.

Floyd trucker injured in coal truck pileup

by Geoff Belcher
Staff Writer

A Floyd County coal hauler was injured Friday at Louisa in a four-vehicle pileup that resulted in a fuel spill and fire that forced the closure of all five lanes of U.S. 23 for several hours.

According to a report issued by the Lawrence County Sheriff's Department, three coal trucks were parked on the side of the highway Friday when Clayton Conn, 23, of Harold, apparently rear-ended one of them. Conn was thrown from the truck, the report said, but the vehicle burst into flames. Drivers of the other trucks pulled Conn to safety, the report said.

Conn was transported to the Three Rivers Medical Center at Louisa, where he was admitted for observation and treatment of multiple abrasions and lacerations. Conn was released Sunday; a hospital spokesman said.

The accident is under investigation by officers of the Lawrence County Sheriff's Department.

Webb's dismissal appealed

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Floyd County Commonwealth Attorney Jerry Patton filed an appeal Friday objecting to the dismissal of arson charges against Jailer-elect Roger Webb and two other men.

The appeal, filed in Floyd Circuit Court, lists no reason for appealing the dismissal.

Last month, Floyd Circuit Judge John David Caudill dismissed arson charges against Webb, Columbus Slone and Willie Delong because of a three-year rule concerning criminal cases. Under the rule, defendants must be brought to trial within three years.

The charges were first filed in 1988 and later dismissed by former Circuit Judge Hollis Conley.

Webb, Slone, Delong and Roger Parsons were indicted again in June on the same charges of complicity to commit arson and second degree arson.

At their July 23 arraignment, attorney Dan Jack Combs, who represented Webb, attorney Ned Pillersdorf, representing Delong, and James R. Allen, representing Slone, argued

State asks for Billips' comments

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Floyd County School Board member Eddie Billips has been asked to speak to an education subcommittee in Frankfort Thursday about the school superintendent selection process.

State Representative Joe Barrows, chairman of the Subcommittee on Governance and Finance of the Interim Joint Committee on Education, invited Billips to discuss the relationship between the screening committee and the school board; to give an overview of the committee's operations, as adopting guidelines and timelines; hiring a consultant; the applicant pool; and financial support process.

The Floyd County school system was the first school district to use a superintendent screening committee, mandated under Kentucky's Education Reform Act, to hire a new superintendent for the school district.

The committee and school board's choice, Nebraska educator Bill Zitterkopf, was voted last July by Technology project, one of state's best

Floyd County School District's technology program is receiving recognition as one of the state's best.

The program was deemed "one of the best plans" reviewed by the state Department of Education's Director of the Division of Computer Operations, David Couch.

Couch, in a letter about the district's technology plan, wrote, "It is obvious that your technology coordinator and committees have tried to maximize the planning effort for your district. Their efforts are commendable. Your district and the Kentucky Education Technology System (KETS) will benefit for many years from this comprehensive effort."

Couch has asked Harold Burchell, Floyd County's technology coordinator, to address the state Board of Education about the exemplary plan. Burchell compiled the plan with input from schools and the district's technology committee.

When fully implemented, all Floyd County students will have access to Harold Burchell is coordinator of Floyd County's technology program. The program has captured the attention of state officials for its implementation of technology into the classroom. EduQuest also named the program a Kentucky success story. Burchell plans to link the school system to a statewide network of technology.

State court of appeals orders new trial for Penix

The Kentucky Court of Appeals has ordered a new trial for a Johnson County man accused of killing a Floyd County teenager in 1990.

In unanimously overturning the manslaughter conviction of Jim Jack Penix Jr. of Van Lear, a three-member appellate court panel said the prosecution "committed reversible error" during closing arguments in Penix's 1991 trial at Martin County. Penix was convicted of second-degree manslaughter in the May 13, 1990, shooting death of Barrett Heath Endicott, 19, of Prestonsburg. Endicott was shot once in the head during a get-together at a trailer near Combs Airport at Hager Hill.

Penix, who was 31 at the time of his conviction, was sentenced to 10 years in prison by Circuit Judge Stephen N. Frazier.

The prosecution claimed during the trial in Martin County Court that Penix shot Endicott because the victim had won a "wrestling match" against Penix earlier in the evening. Penix claimed the shooting was accidental and that he didn't know the weapon, a .33-caliber Winchester rifle, was loaded.

Penix's attorney, Ned Phillipsdorf, appealed the conviction, claiming the conviction's evidence was irrelevant, numerous errors in the case. He contended that the prosecution improperly mentioned in closing arguments that the rifle could not fire unless the safety was released, that testimony by the victim's mother was irrelevant and served no purpose other than to appeal to the jury's emotions, and that a photograph of the victim unduly inflamed and prejudiced the jury.

The appellate court agreed that the prosecution's comment regarding the gun's safety was improper and warranted a new trial, even though Judge Frazier admitted the jury to disregard the statement.

Writing for the court, Judge A.M. Webb, dissenting, contended that the prosecution's closing argument, the rifle was safely fresh in the minds of the jurors as they began their deliberations, and it certainly had a devastating effect on the defense of accident. Penix only admitted the rifle to be pointed at the victim without knowing whether or not it was loaded, and said that it didn't seem to be a reckless act that if he had also taken the step of releasing the safety, the rifle might well have fired. In this regard, Webb said that he asked what

"Under the circumstances, we doubt that it was possible for any juror to matter how far-minded he or she might be, to put out of his or her mind the fact related and sought to be demonstrated by the prosecution in closing argument that the rifle would not fire until the safety was released. For this reason, we believe a new trial is required."

The appellate judges reversed Penix's conviction and remanded the case to Frazier for a new trial.

when monies are available.

Any miscalculation could be devastating, Thompson said.

"If you project it and hit it right, you have community and look good," Thompson said. "If you miss the projection, you look bad. It's guesswork. If you guess wrong, you run short of money."

Cost overruns in the sheriff's department for vehicle maintenance and gasoline have added to the sheriff's problems.

"Our main problem is a cash flow problem due to overspending in vehicle maintenance and gas," Thompson said.

For example, if you have a cruiser with the transmission out or you have spent all the gas money allotted for the month, and you get a complaint, it's hard to tell someone you have a cruiser without a transmission or you don't have the gas money. So, in order to continue providing services, we had to overspend the budget in vehicle maintenance, gasoline and repairs."

Local county government has been very cooperative with the sheriff's department, Thompson said, paying for employee's health insurance, vehicle insurance and contributing approximately $6,000 for vehicles.

"The fiscal court could give us some money, but they have to live within their budget just like I have to live within mine," Thompson said.

Thompson has stepped up efforts to collect delinquent tax accounts and two attempts to seize bank accounts have resulted in delinquent accounts being paid. One account has been sent to the attorney general's office for resolution.

One way to alleviate money problems, Thompson said, is for sheriffs to be allowed to submit an annual budget which would take much of the guesswork out of the system. Thompson said he hopes the issue will be addressed in the 1994 session of the General Assembly.

In the meantime, Thompson said, the department will provide what services it can in the area of law enforcement.

EKU offers minors in Aviation Administration

Eastern Kentucky University, the only university in Kentucky that offers a four-year professional pilot degree, is now offering a minor in aviation administration.

"There are a lot of people out there who are not interested in a career in flight, but they are interested in an aviation industry position where flight is not required," said Dr. Wilma Walker, coordinator of EKU's aviation program. "We've had several inquiries about this."

To earn a minor in aviation administration, a student must complete the following courses: Introduction of Aviation or Private Pilot; Ground, Flight Safety, Air Transportation, Air Traffic Control, Aviation Administration and Aviation Legislation, plus three hours of approved electives.

Three scholarship funds have been established to assist students enrolled in Eastern's aviation program.

For more information, about EKU's aviation program, call Dr. Wilma Walker at 606-622-1418.

Said Dr. Stephen Towler, superintendent of the Floyd County Schools, "Mr. Burchell, the committee, our teachers, principals and technology coordinators have all worked very hard. Their work will pay big dividends for our students in the future, as they will be well-prepared for the changing job market."

Burchell is also trying to involve more people locally in the technology program. Last school year, approximately 500 people attended the first Floyd County Schools Technology Showcase at Jenny Wiley State Park. Burchell said he plans to make the event an annual one.

The school system sponsors at least two technology training sessions each month for its teachers. Burchell said those training sessions are now open to members of the general public who are interested in learning more about technology. Those interested in the training may obtain more information by calling Burchell at 866-2354.

been without supervision for that period of time, maybe ever," Meeks said.

Although Garrett, Meeks and state police officers had searched the surrounding area for her sister, Garrett said, she did not believe that Nelson simply wandered off by herself. Rather, Garrett said, she thought Nelson had been abducted.

Ward said authorities had ruled out the possibility that Nelson may have been picked up by a friend or relative Sunday, but said that several other leads were being investigated.

Nelson was discovered late Tuesday afternoon wandering around outside the Pikeville Wal-Mart Discount Store by a Mountain Comprehensive Care employee, Garrett said.

The circumstances surrounding Nelson's disappearance were unclear Tuesday evening.

The incident is under investigation by officers of the Pikeville Post of the Kentucky State Police.

Education Commissioner Thomas Boyesen. Boyesen recommended the district hire former Hardin County Superintendent Steve Towler. Towler was hired for a four-year contract last July.

Billips publicly chastised Boyesen for his interference in Floyd County's search for a new superintendent.

Boyesen later admitted he made a mistake by getting involved in Floyd County's superintendent selection process.

Thursday's meeting begins at 10 a.m. in Room 127 of the Capitol Annex.

that the clients had been denied the right to a speedy trial because the initial charges had been leveled almost five years ago.

Judge Caudill apparently agreed with the attorney's arguments and dismissed the charges.

A fourth person charged in connection with the case, Roger Parsons, did not have legal representation at his July arraignment and a second-degree conspiracy to commit arson charge against him is pending.

Webb was accused of conspiring with Sam Shepherd and Rick Blevins in November 1988 and February 1989 to burn the home of DeLong and Stone.

DeLong was charged with second-degree arson for allegedly starting a fire in a building he owned with the intent to destroy the building to collect insurance proceeds.

Stone was charged with second-degree arson for allegedly starting a fire in a building he owned with the intent to destroy the building to collect insurance proceeds. Stone was also charged with first-degree arson for allegedly starting a fire to collect insurance proceeds by the Prestonsburg Fire Department.

Webb won the democratic nomination for Floyd County judge in the May primary election. Webb faces no primary election in November general election.

Battle begins to save B. L. school addition

by Susan Allen
Staff Writer

Betsy Layne parents have taken the news hard that plans have been scrapped for a 21-classroom addition to the grade school, but they have by no means given up on the project.

At a meeting of concerned citizens Thursday at the grade school, residents were dismayed that their school board member, Brent Clark, didn't attend, but that didn't deter them from making their battle plans.

Charlotte Rogers, Parent Teacher Organization president, called for volunteers to circulate petitions to keep the building project ongoing.

The citizens group also plans to attend the September state school board meeting in Frankfort to voice their concerns about the local school board's decision last month to abandon the school construction project.

At the July Floyd County Board of Education meeting, members voted to terminate the 21-classroom addition project at Betsy Layne. Board member Clark, who proposed the action, said that building a middle school in the area would eliminate mobile classroom units at the grade school. Clark said eliminating the mobile units would put $1 million in the district's general fund over a five-year period.

Betsy Layne residents didn't buy Clark's reasoning and said that a middle school would not eliminate the problem.

Betsy Layne principal Fonzo Akers prepared a breakdown of the school campus which lists 13 classrooms housed in 10 mobile units. The breakdown also lists one mobile unit being used for preschool classes and one unit for the family resource facility.

Of all the schools in the county, Betsy Layne Elementary leads the district in using mobile units for school classes with 11,592 square feet, not including two mobile units recently placed at the school, Akers' breakdown shows.

Several citizens complained that the local school officials have spent close to half a million dollars on a "dirt pile" which has caused cramped conditions on the small school campus. Citizens said that since the project has been started, it ought to be finished.

Some citizens also mentioned keeping students home when the 1993-94 school year begins to protest the termination of the classroom addition project.

Principal Akers asked that parents refrain from a boycott, saying it would be harmful to children's education. Akers vowed to endorse any other action by the community group.

Betsy Layne resident Dan Hall told the group of about 40 residents that the state Department of Education supported the Betsy Layne project and if the state board failed to intervene in the situation, the local board's decision would stand. Hall urged the citizens to talk to other members of the local school board.

The group also decided to invite the entire board of education to a community meeting August 10 at 6 p.m. at the school. Citizens hope to get answers from other board members and to, hopefully, change their minds about stopping the project.

After Thursday's meeting, Rogers and Michael Rodriguez offered a tour of the Betsy Layne facility and pointed out several problems with the older facility.

A row of trailers beside the main building, called "Hudville" houses the school's primary program. With no restroom in the trailers, children have to walk outside on an unsheltered path, in all kinds of weather, to the main building to use restroom facilities, Rogers said.

A walk for the primary students to the gym for physical education is estimated to be at least one-fourth of mile.

Many of the trailers on campus have metal siding that has pulled away leaving sharp edges protruding, which Rodriguez says could seriously injure students.

Inside the main building, in a downstairs faculty bathroom, raw sewage leaks from the upstairs bathroom directly above it and has dripped onto unsuspecting persons in the restroom, Rodriguez said.

Also, boys bathrooms in the buildings have urinals with no running water. The downstairs boys bathroom has a clear glass window which virtually prohibits any privacy.

Boys and girls bathrooms have only cold water faucets.

In several areas, there are large gaping holes in the ceiling. Also, uneven sets of stairways make it difficult for children to keep from falling, Rogers said.

Beware of solicitations in the guise of invoices

Nobody likes paying bills; especially not phony bills or invoices for misrepresented services. Yet many Kentucky businesses mistakenly pay phony or misleading invoices that are often intended to deceive them. The Better Business Bureau of Central & Eastern Kentucky Inc. advises businesses to educate their employees about solicitations in the guise of invoices—particularly for phony yellow page advertisements.

How do you recognize these solicitations? One yellow page company mailed an offer to the Better Business Bureau. At first glance, it appeared to be an invoice for a regular yellow page listing. It included the Bureau's phone number, address and classification, had the ever familiar "walking fingers" logo in the upper right corner and indicated that $127 was due for a "Yellow Pages Business Listing." Such an "invoice" could easily be confused with legiti-mate bills and therefore would be paid by a busy or distracted employee.

The Better Business Bureau routinely handles calls and complaints about such matters. "The Yellow Pages are a convenient advertising section of the local telephone directories," said Tom Marsh, owner of Marsh Realty in Harrodsburg, Kentucky. Marsh recently contacted the BBB to complain about phony yellow page invoices targeting his firm. "Enough (businesses) are misled, thinking these invoices are from their telephone company, thereby allowing these phony bills to continue," said a concerned Marsh.

What advice can be offered? "It seems these bills always use the 'walking fingers' logo," explains Pete Peterson, Division Manager of GTE Directories Sales Corp. "Businesses need to be aware that this logo is not protected by trademark; anyone can use it, and does. If you receive a yellow page invoice, you should look for 'GTE,' 'South Central Bell,' or the name of your local phone company on the invoice. If the bill looks suspicious, contact your local phone company and/or the BBB."

There are laws and regulations against this description. It is illegal to mail a bill, invoice or statement of account due that really is a solicitation unless it clearly bears either of two disclaimers in at least 30-point type and in a color that will reproduce on a copier. Either one of the following disclaimers MUST be used:

1. This is a solicitation for the order of goods or services, or both, and not a bill, invoice, or statement of account due. You are under no obligation to make any payments on account unless you accept this offer.

2. This is not a bill. This is a solicitation. You are under no obligation to pay unless you accept this offer.

For more information, you may obtain the BBB Business Advisory publication, "Solicitations in the Guise of Invoices," by sending $1.00 to BBB, 410 West Vine Street, Suite 280, Lexington, Kentucky 40507.

They won't be missed

Maybe now Magoffin schools can think education

"Goodbye and good riddance" seems the only appropriate farewell for the five recently departed members of the Magoffin County school board. Maybe now, the county can get back on the right education track.

The first to resign bowed out July 14, the remaining four left last week. All five faced ouster hearings next month before the State Board for Elementary and Secondary Education. You might have called them the capitulatory "yes men" for former superintendent Carter Whitaker.

When Whitaker misused school money, the board rubber stamped his squandering. When he invited political opponents, the board nodded and signed the pink slips. Forty-nine times in a row, the board refused to take any stand at all against something Whitaker wanted to do. For all practical purposes, Magoffin County might as well have been without a school board during this period. But now that this crowd is gone, perhaps the county can begin anew with its schools.

So, we bid adieu to these five pillars of educational dysfunction. Don't let the door hit you on your way out.—Lexington Herald Leader

Stop the betrayal

Editor:
I read one of your recent editorials with great interest. You indicated that elected county officials have tried to influence the hiring of a school employee. If this is true, it is a direct violation of the law. It is both the duty and the responsibility of the board members and/or the superintendent that this be reported to the proper officials. Mr. Perry, if you believe your information is correct, I trust you have reported this to the DEA and given them the names of the parties involved.

I find it appalling that politicians use the school system to try and help them in an election or to build a power base for themselves. Whenever these people, who are elected to serve the public, going to stop betraying the children in this county?

We have heard reports that central office personnel are also attempting to influence hiring. Teachers and members of the community are becoming disillusioned once again. They are asked to serve on committees that give the appearance that they are involved and their rights are being sought. This is just a show.

Have we not had enough? It's time to bring these kinds of activities to a screeching halt. Our children deserve better than this. Report it, investigate it, and expose it and them!

Searching for Harlow

Editor:
I'm writing to find the address of Gay Harlow. She put a piece in your paper about Michele Harlow, who died December 17, 1987. I think it was an earlier issue. It was cryptic and given to me. My father was Mrs. Harlow. I'm trying to find some of his people. Gay Harlow said she was a great great-granddaughter of Richard Allen and Emily Williams of Floyd County. My aunt married David Allen, great grandson of Richard Allen. He had the son of Elizabeth Allen. My aunt and mother's uncles married Susan Allen and Betty Allen daughter of Elizabeth Allen. Then names were Pleasant Whitley or Whitley and Robert Whitley or Whitley. I would love to get in touch with her.

Florida reader likes Times' Kim's Korner

Editor:
Regarding the letter of Teresa Moore of Cape Coral, Florida, making disparaging remarks concerning Kim Frasure and Kim's Korner, Ms. Moore seemed to indicate that all ex-Floyd citizens living in Florida will look down upon the contents of her column.

I like to say to Ms. Moore as an ex-Floyd citizen, living in Florida, enjoy Kim's column very much and look forward to reading more of her columns in the future.

Please don't get the idea that everyone living in Florida is a snob and looks down on Floyd County.

Keep up the good work, Kim!

America's unmarried moms

The Census Bureau reports that the number of American women bearing children out of wedlock has jumped sharply over the last decade. Some 25 percent of all births nationwide now are to unmarried women. The figure is up from 15 percent in 1982 and from only 4 percent in 1960.

The study shows that while unmarried mothers are still predominantly poor, undereducated minority women—women who in many cases lack access to family planning assistance and may have few choices available to them—the most dramatic rise over the past 10 years was among those who have many more options at hand: educated and professional women. The increase may be attributable to their greater earning power, and to the wane of stigmatized illegitimate children at their mothers.

Given what we know about the uphill climb for many children raised in fatherless households, any increase in the number of children born to unwed mothers is a worrisome trend.

Those children are more likely than others to live in poverty, have low school grades, drop out of high school and to suffer behavioral or emotional problems.

But there is much the study doesn't tell us. How many of those unmarried mothers do live with the child's father or some kind of father-figure? How many chose not to marry the father because they have good reason to believe the child would be better off without him?

There are many thousands of women—poor and affluent—who are responsibly and successfully rearing children on their own. There are many married couples making a mess of theirs.

A couple of years ago, Dan Quayle criticized the television character "Murphy Brown" for glamorizing single motherhood and portraying it as just another "lifestyle choice." The census figures might seem to bear out his claim that out-of-wedlock births have become fashionable—and in some circles they have. But for many women, there is no choice at all. Boyfriends desert, birth control fails, abortion for personal reasons is often not an option and giving a baby up for adoption may be too painful.

And there is the flip side of the coin, which neither Quayle nor the census study seem to consider. For every baby born out of wedlock there is a man somewhere who was a contributor. The more effective we become in forcing them to meet their responsibilities, the more likely they will be to think twice about fathering those kids.

The data won't tell us what leads to any one woman's decision, if it's a voluntary act, if not pregnant, nor why women who unintentionally become pregnant decide to keep a baby. What's certain is that many still have far too little information to make reasonable choices.

What's left is the hope that potential mothers will give a lot of thought to the struggles they will face and the responsibilities they take on. Though they are often stuck pondering the choices alone, they have to know their decisions are not just for themselves.

One dies in Pike accident

A Pike County man is dead following an automobile accident early Tuesday morning. State police reports said Larry R. Abshire, 18, of Mouthed was killed at approximately 3:17 a.m. two miles east of Belcher. Abshire was a passenger in a 1991 Ford Explorer driven by Christopher L. Branham, 18, of Lick Creek. The two were traveling east on U.S. 460 when Branham apparently ran off the shoulder of the roadway. In an attempt to regain control, the driver apparently overcompensated, causing the vehicle to again leave the roadway and strike an embankment where it overturned. Abshire was pronounced dead on the scene by Pike County Coroner Charles Morris.

The accident is under investigation. - Staff report

Woman robbed in Magoffin

An elderly woman was the victim of a daylight robbery on Tuesday. State police reports said Gladys Connelley, 93, of Salsersville was at her home when, at about 3:30 p.m., a male subject entered her residence. He was armed with a large stick and threatened to harm her if she did not cooperate. He pushed her around, tied her up and stole about $43 from her purse. He left the residence and fled the vicinity on a bicycle. The suspect is described as a white male of slender build with brown shoulder-length hair. Anyone with information regarding the robbery should contact Detective Cross at Ky. State Police Post 9 at 1-800-222-5555. - Staff report

Woman wins discrimination suit

A U.S. District Court jury on Friday awarded a Knott County woman 19 months back pay and $50,000 in other damages after finding she was discriminated against by the county.

The jury ruled that Judge-Executive Homer Sawyer failed to hire Lisa Johnson Bates as an emergency medical technician for the county ambulance service because she is a woman.

Bates, 26, of Leburn, first applied for the job in 1989, but five men were hired over her during the next two years. She applied four different times, but Sawyer denied having seen the applications.

Sawyer said he had a lot of applications and cited individual qualifications for hiring the people he did. - Appalachian News-Express

Two sentenced in coal dust cases

U.S. District Judge Joseph Hood sentenced two more Eastern Kentucky men to probation and home detention Monday for falsifying coal-dust samples meant to protect miners against black lung disease.

DBI Coal Company president Larry Cantrell of Knott County and D & L Coal Company foreman Randal Lester of Pike County pleaded guilty in April. They admitted that the false dust samples were submitted on their behalf to the Mine Safety and Health Administration.

Hood sentenced Cantrell to one year's probation and a $2,500 fine. The first six months of the probation will be spent on weekend home confinement. Lester also received a year's probation, with the first two months to be spent in home confinement. Hood also fined him $2,000. - Louisville Courier-Journal

Breaking the gridlock on Capitol Hill

by Leonard Larsen
Scripts Howard News Service
WASHINGTON — The welcome good news out of Congress is that majority Democrats may be so frightened by the threat of an election-day whipping they're forced to act like responsible leaders of a national political party.

It's a rare display of American politicians banded together by a growing dread of voters fed up with lies and empty promises, politicians so scared for their own skins they would act together for the public good.

It's also a sign that Democrats in Congress and in the Clinton administration have come to understand that American voters weren't simply angry at the "gridlock" that divided the Democratic Congress and successive Republican administrations.

Americans, if ongoing polls and other public-opinion samplings can be believed, will be very bitas mad—maybe even madder—about a one-party government that does nothing as they were with two-party "gridlock."

The key negotiators are two of the wildest operators in the Capitol, Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, and Sen. Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

All that Rostenkowski and Moynihan have to do is to supervise approval of a massive budget package, so artful in its construction of taxes and spending it will gather enough Democratic votes in both the Senate and House to assure its passage.

Majority Democrats have already been put on notice by prior votes that there'll be no Republican support for whatever comes out of the conference committee as the Clinton economic program, that minority Republicans will take their party position as simply "against" and Democrats must do this without them.

Both Rostenkowski and Moynihan have acknowledged the high political stakes, now that "gridlock" is ended and Democrats are in charge at the White House as well as in Capitol Hill.

In a Washington Post interview, Moynihan suggested the overwhelming need for Democrats, if they are to survive the elections of 1994-96, to forge party cohesiveness and responsibility. "What is at issue is our ability to put our public finances back in order... We have to do it."

The Republicans are gambling on their own in the first round of arguments over a Clinton administration economic program, standing opposed to just about anything Democrats come up with, a gamble—in effect—that they'll win if the nation's economy gets sicker on pure Democratic medicines.

The Democratic gamble is the larger one: that they could lose the presidency and at least one house of Congress if they can't weld a party agreement around a Clinton economic plan and bring enough party pressure to force its passage through the full Congress.

And while Rostenkowski and Moynihan are burdened with hair-splitting details of the economic package, chances are most Americans will settle for a good-faith legislative effort, an economic package that spreads the burden and isn't obviously tilted to special interests.

The grim do-or-die picture of a victorious Democratic Party now holding undivided political power in Washington while sitting on a ticking bomb that will explode with another round of political misgovernment is not an unappealing sight.

This time the Democrats are in charge of the White House and Congress. It's their responsibility. And the good news is that if they don't produce, they can be booted out. The other good news is that fear may force them to succeed and we could all be the better for it.

EKU expects enrollment increase of Floyd students

Floyd County will be well represented among approximately 16,500 students expected to enroll for classes this fall at Eastern Kentucky University.

Last year, 132 Floyd County residents attended EKV, and a similar number is expected for the 1993-94 academic year as overall enrollment stabilizes after nearly a decade of continuous growth.

They and fellow students have already noticed one change that is evident at every public university in Kentucky: higher tuition. Other results of recent state budget cuts to higher education are larger classes in some instances and fewer class choices.

"This is an unfortunate situation," said EKV President Harri Funderburk. "At a time when demand for higher education is at an all-time high, state assistance to our fine system of universities continues to decline. This directly impacts accessibility."

However, about 70 percent of EKV students will take advantage of at least one of the many financial assistance options available: grants, loans, employment, academic and athletic scholarships, and others. The average annual award at Eastern is $2,400.

The University has also sought to improve accessibility by opening educational centers in Manchester and Corbin in recent years. Both centers have prospered, and EKV's physical plant center in Danville, in addition to on-campus offerings throughout the University's 22 county service region, and beyond.

Eastern has also increased its efforts in recent years to attract the Commonwealth's best and brightest students. Automatic scholarships are given to qualifying high school seniors, and increasing number of scholarships related to a student's particular field of study are available. EKV's Honors Program, designed for intellectually promising students who seek a strong grounding in the liberal arts along with their more specialized major, continues to draw academically talented students to the Richmond campus.

Several academic programs have been refined to meet the needs of students and the various professions they'll enter.

"This is part of a continuing restructuring process," Funderburk said. "We'll drop, adjust, or add courses and programs as needed."

EKV's president promised that recent budget cuts won't change what has always been the primary emphasis at Eastern: excellence in teaching and advising.

"We've worked hard to maintain that focus," Funderburk said, "and will continue to do so."

The fall semester begins Sunday, August 15 when residence halls open at 6 p.m.

Registration is continuing. For more information, call EKV's admissions office, 606-622-2106.

Ministry gives old school new life

By Polly Ward
Paintsville Staff Writer

The First Baptist Church of Paintsville, Ky., has been resurrected.

Although children are no longer being taught reading, writing and arithmetic within its walls, the white wood-frame building is nonetheless alive with activity.

New children are being baptized, new members are being added, and new life is being breathed into the old church.

A series of events has been planned for the church, including a "Back in Time" service, a "Gospel Sing," and a "Card of Thanks" service.

The church is now open for worship services, and the community is invited to join in the new life of the church.

They are, in effect, providing a worship experience for individuals who have been able to have it. Those who could not worship God come to the services.

Jane Hammond and her husband, Jim Hammond of Martin, attend the resort ministry services and then later attend regular morning worship services.

The resort ministry is great for the church and for people who want to worship God.

He added, "I'm just pleased with the church members who have volunteered their time. We have 15 to 20 core members who help from time to time."

Dee White, First Baptist's music director, directs the singing while three members play hymns on their guitars. Each service also has special music, such as solos, and Hammond said that he keeps his sermons short.

The four-hour service begins at 8:30 but some members of First Baptist like the Floyd and Hazard County arrive at the school building earlier.

"About six of us get there early," Lloyd said. "We have about a 30-minute time for socializing."

"We serve coffee and socialize," said Lloyd. "I think it's wonderful ministry."

Lloyd called the ministry "very unique. Not all of the state parks have this type of ministry. We are very lucky to have this schoolhouse. The Park Service has been very generous."

They have furnished the coffee, food, and donuts."

Leo and Pearl Watts of Allen also have active roles in the resort ministry. Leo was director of the Daniel's Creek mission and Pearl taught Sunday school for well over two decades.

"We spent 27 1/2 years at Daniel's Creek Mission," Pearl said. "On August 5, 1992, we closed the mission work out. Gony back and getting to work at the schoolhouse is like getting to work at the mission all over again."

The Watts arrive at the schoolhouse early on Sunday mornings to "clean the building, pick up the regulations, and serve food as guests come," Pearl said. "We appreciate the part the Park Service has played. They have been extra good to us really cooperative."

Roy Vanover, the park recreation director, said that he thought the park was the perfect place for the church. The building had been relocated. "I researched the history of the school and discovered that Allen First Baptist Church had services there," he said. "I decided it was more profitable to call the Baptist church back up to conduct services than to start from scratch."

Vanover said the services at the park for campers and lodge guests. We had such a time before, we decided to continue the services to First Baptist.

He said police from park guests has been positive. "All the campers are overjoyed that members of the church come and talk to them about the ministry. They are so sure that people will care about others."

The park also holds park sing presentations once a week, usually Thursday evenings at 7 p.m. at Harkins school and the turnout has been good.

As for a resort ministry next summer, Hammond said, "After Labor Day the mission committee of First Baptist will sit down and plan what we want to do for next year."

For more information about the resort ministry, call Hammond at First Baptist Church of Allen at 874-9408. For information about the Harkins schoolhouse and recreational programs at the park, call Vanover at Jenny Wiley State Resort Park at 886-2711.

The family of Alpha Derosssett would like to take this time to express their appreciation to all their friends, neighbors, and family who helped in any way during the loss of our loved one. Whether it was with food, flowers, comforting words or prayers, it will never be forgotten. A very special thanks to Bro. Austin, and to the Highland Avenue Freewill Baptist Church for their special songs, and all the special singers; the city police for traffic control; and Nelson-Frazier Funeral Home for their kind and efficient service.

Kentucky Opry

The Kentucky Opry Junior Pros participated in the park last weekend to lend a helping hand to needy Pike County residents.

The young musicians appeared in concert with Jim Taylor, Kentucky Opry Junior Pro All-Stars, The Sammons Family and the Westwind Band to benefit Helping Hand, a volunteer organization that helps the needy. Helping Hand provides low-income Pike County residents with clothing, supplies and food.

The second annual "Party in the Park" began at 6 p.m. with Jim Taylor performing the stage in the W.C. Hambley Athletic Complex next to Pikeville High School. Taylor recently won the Floyd County Talent Search held at the Little Theatre in Prestonsburg.

The benefit was sponsored by the McJunkin Corporation of Pikeville. Admission price for the concert was two items of nonperishable food per person. Door prizes will be given away.

For more information about the Junior Pros, call 886-1341.

Kentucky Opry's Little Theater rocks to a country beat on Friday nights.

The Junior Pro All-Stars slide, stomp and jump into western line dancing beginning at 8 p.m.

Don't miss this one. If a rehearsal is any indication of what's to come, this will be a dynamic performance.

Tickets are $3 for adults and $2 for students.

Children receive free dental service at health department

The University of Kentucky mobile dental clinic, stationed at the Floyd County Health Department in Prestonsburg, closed out its summer program in the Floyd County Thursday, July 29. Since the dental clinic's opening on June 1, the dental staff, comprised of two dentists, two dental students and three assistants, has treated 105 patients, all children, free of charge.

Those eligible for the program, which was based on income guidelines, were "those who have no insurance, those who fell between the gaps of medical coverage or who are medically indigent," said Floyd County Health Department director Earl Compton.

Procedures performed included extractions and fillings as well as check-ups, Compton said. He added that the public response was "overwhelming. We didn't even publicize it and we got more applicants than we could handle."

Applicants were screened by health department nurses who informed patients about the program.

The mobile dental clinic service, which began last summer, is just one of more than 30 programs the health department offers Floyd County residents. Other health departments around the state also offer numerous programs and services. During the 1992-93 fiscal year, local health departments provided an estimated 3.6 million medical services to an estimated 769,000 Kentuckians.

Accordingly, Governor Brereton C. Jones declared July 25-31 as Local Health Department Recognition Week to spotlight the services provided by the 226 health department units in all 120 counties.

"Public health exists to promote wellness and prevent illness and injury for everyone in Kentucky," said Health Services Commissioner Rice Leach, M.D. "No matter how old you are or how young, how much or how little money you make or where you live, Kentucky's public health workers are helping you to be well."

Leach said that many health care providers offer primary care and preventive services, including health departments, but that the local health second home run of the tournament in the fifth inning. He finished with four hits in the game and had three runs batted in. Holbrook's defense was excellent at second base.

Billy "Side-hat" Elam picked up the win, his second of the tournament. Elam defeated Louisville in the opening game of the tournament, 4-3.

Elam was in control all the way, walking but two batters. He scattered six hits while allowing three runs.

Coach Brown inserted Barry Collins to pitch the seventh inning and fanned the side after allowing one run on one hit.

For Louisville, the shortage of pitchers caught up with them in the final game as they paraded six throwers to the mound. Todd Goldsmith suffered the loss for Valley in a starting role. He was followed in the bullpen by Brian Evans, Danny Cravens, Hornback and Phil Durbin.

Louisville jumped out to a 1-0 lead but Paintsville scored twice in the first on Kidd's two-run single down the right field line.

Elam returned Valley in order in the second with Paintsville playing four runs in the inning at the encouragement of Coach Brown, who refused to let his team take anything for granted. Tiller, Holbrook, Justin Hall and P.D. Kinchloe had RBI hits in the inning as Paintsville led 6-1 after two.

Excellent defense for Paintsville kept Louisville off the scoreboard in the next three innings as Paintsville marched batter after batter to take their swings.

Holbrook's RBI single in the third and a sacrifice fly off the bat of Brent Adams made it a 9-1 game.

In the fourth Tiller drilled his solo home run and Pinson hit his three-run shot as Paintsville scored four times for a 13-1 thrashing.

While Louisville was looking for some offense, Paintsville really put the hurt on as they sent 14 batters to the plate and scored 10 times as the rout was on.

Pinson surprised his teammates with his display of power as he hit the grand slam in his second at bat in the inning. Kidd later hit his grand slam in the fifth and Holbrook connected on a solo shot.

Scott Caudill, who entered the game in the fifth, led off the sixth with a home run over the left-center field fence.

Brian Evans hammered a two-run shot for Louisville in the fifth to break a scoring drought. Valley scored their final run in the seventh on a wild pitch from Collins.

Coach Brown had told his team before the start of the game that he wanted runs from his team in every inning. They responded to the request and advanced on to Southeastern Regional play in London, Kentucky.

FALLS IN EXTRA INNINGS

For Paintsville, the celebration did not come as early as they had hoped. Paintsville lost their first game in the tournament to Louisville on Thursday night as Valley scored three times in the ninth to take a 12-9 lead.

The two teams played to a 9-9 standoff as darkness drifted in and the game was called until Friday. The park that was the site of the tournament had no lights.

The game was resumed Friday at 1 p.m. going into the eighth inning. Valley went out in order in the eighth as did Paintsville.

Louisville reached Scotty Caudill, who relieved Brent Hamilton in the fourth, for two runs in the ninth and Valley scored once off of Elam to take a 12-9 lead.

But, like they did all through the game, Paintsville pulled to within one run but left the bases loaded, falling 12-11.

Brad Tiller homered in the ninth and Adams scored on an error as Paintsville loaded the bases. But, for the fourth time in the game, Paintsville squandered a chance to put the game in the win column.

Paintsville left the sacks full in the seventh with a chance to end it all but failed to score. They did the same in the second and the fourth. Paintsville trailed 9-4 entering the fifth inning. Two runs scored to make it 9-6 before Holbrook knotted the game at 9-9 with a long drive over the right centerfield fence for a three-run home run.

Tournament notes:

• Brad Tiller homered in each of the four games Paintsville played.

• Paintsville as a team hit 13 home runs in the four games.

• Paintsville had six homers in the final game against Valley.

• Billy Elam won two of the three games Paintsville won. Barry Clark won the other one.

• Bud Kidd had 10 RBIs in the four games. He homered three times. He also fanned three times with the bases loaded.

• John Holbrook, after scratching out only one hit in the first two games, collected six over the final two games.

• Barry Hall played the first two games with Paintsville but had to go to work and missed the final two.

• Paintsville was only able to retire Brian Evans, a huge kid, twice from the plate. He hit a fly ball to centerfield in game three and also struck out in game three. Evans had eight hits in 10 at bats against Paintsville. He homered twice. He's a tremendous ballplayer.

• Justin Hall made believers out of base runners in the four games that he caught. No one stole a base against him. He threw out both runners that attempted to steal. He had only two passed balls.

• Tiller had five walks in the four games and was hit twice.

• Hader Riddle was unable to play because of a bad knee.

Investors Frustrated And Disgusted With 3% CD's. Say They Are Victims Of Bank's Greed.

Lexington, KY—Today's retirees, and others who are counting on their nest eggs to provide for them are frustrated and angry. They feel that the banks are taking advantage of the economy to create obscene profits.

A local retiree was quoted as saying, "The bank is still charging over 17% on credit card balances, and paying me a lousy 3.1% on my CD! This is unfair. I have worked my whole life, and always taken care of myself. Now, in the last three years, I have seen all my expenses go up, and my CD income drop to less than half of what it was! The banks should be ashamed of themselves. How am I going to make it?"

The feelings of this woman seem to be universal, when people are asked about this touchy topic.

Although CD's are insured by an agency of the US Government, and alternatives may not be, people can do much better with their savings.

As with anything else, knowledge is the key. The banks are making more money than ever, and hope the average person will not bother to learn about their alternatives. The bankers want people to keep their money tied up at these disgusting low rates and know a lot of us will not move because of the fear of the unknown.

A FREE REPORT called The Little Known Secret To Beating CD's, has been made available for the first time. The report explains, in simple language, the almost unheard of method to take care of yourself, and tells you how to stop being at the mercy of the banks. You can call 1-800-817-1117, 24 hours, for a FREE, recorded message, to get your copy of the report. Call now, and find out what the bank doesn't want you to know!

"ELECT" GEORGE P. ARCHER Mayor

August is here and with it comes the start of the Fall '93 election campaign season. Over the next few months, many of the candidates running for various offices will be making all kinds of promises, in the hope you will vote for them. These campaign promises fall into four types.

- Those which due to costs or circumstance are not practical or possible to pursue.
- Those which sound TOO good to be true (and they usually are).
- Those which are good for the few and not for all the people (the old "smoke-filled-room" type).
- Those which a candidate CAN and SHOULD strive to make and keep.

It is this last type of promise that I have chosen to base my campaign on, and the test I put the following "platform" to. My platform is:

- To be honest with the citizens, the council and all city departments in conducting the day-to-day affairs of the city.
- To be available to meet with citizens, groups, council and city employees. LISTEN to their thoughts, suggestions, problems and SOLUTIONS. It is through this TEAM approach that real progress has been made in the past, and the ONLY way success can be reached today.
- To be open with the city as a whole on issues, problems and opportunities we must face TOGETHER over the next few years.
- To make it possible for ALL citizens to be kept up-to-date on the happenings in and around the town. I will have an open door to the media. I will be available both on a regularly scheduled basis and "as needed." I am also pledged to explore any untapped forum, such as neighborhood roundtable talks, citizens action committees, etc., to get the input WE at city hall need, and to see that any citizen who wishes to, CAN get involved.
- To assist, listen to and respectfully work with the members of the city council, department heads and staff. It is the bickering and "in-fighting" that has stood in our way over at least the last two years, possibly longer, and it has come from ALL sides. This MUST stop now.
- To see that all Prestonsburg citizens, from the temporary tourist, to the life-long resident feels comfortable and welcome in THEIR town. All city officials (both hired and elected) are here to SERVE the public. This WILL occur.
- All funding available from the state or federal government (such as Grants, Loans and Programs) will be pursued. All co-op arrangements for funds with private business and other local agencies (like the Big Sandy ADB), will also be explored. We've missed a lot of our fair share, we WILL get it.
- To keep the city on sound financial footing. We could spend all day writing checks to pay bills or give large raises to everyone, but if the funds AREN'T there to cover them, there is NO point in writing them or passing NEW spending programs. The system recently put in place by the CURRENT council WILL give us the information needed to see WHERE we stand. (Why this wasn't done years ago is a mystery.)
- To promote our lifestyle, heritage and area. We have much to offer the tourist, business and families, new to the area and this should be built on and expanded as much as possible.
- To work with the various local development groups and government agencies (as well as private concerns) to encourage business development of the AREA. While Prestonsburg will always be FIRST in my mind and heart, and I would always SELL PRESTONSBURG as 1st choice, I will encourage businesses to locate ANYWHERE in the area that would help our people find work, and our area grow. The hostility between different communities (or officials) of our area MUST end, we ALL need to help each other grow, or none of us will.
- To keep the good things GOOD, and if possible, make them better. For example, ARCHER PARK. In the last year funding was down for its upkeep and maintenance as well as future development. This jewel in our crown MUST NOT

READERS (RIGHT) WRITE

P.D. from Louisville writes: "Now that IU has a commitment from a player UK wanted, Andre Patterson, and since UK isn't recruiting Allan Iverson any longer, does this mean your man Putino is going to have another recruiting disappointment?"

COMMENT: Could mean UK's chances with 6-9 Sean Daugherty of Vincennes just improved, if Rick Putino offers. Too, UK's focus may intensify on 6-9ers Samaki Walker of Columbus, Oh, and Adonal Foyle of Hamilton, NY. Point guard? Wait for it, UK fans are going to like Anthony Epps.

WORTH REPEATING DEPARTMENT

Among the best lines in all of sports...

From Field Of Dreams Terrance Mann (James Earl Jones): "One constant through all the years, Ray, has been baseball. (Life is) erased like a blackboard and rebuilt and erased again, but baseball is a constant."

"This field-this game is part of our past. Once all things were good and could be again. Oh, people will come, Ray. They will most definitely come."

Shoeless Joe Jackson (Ray Liotta): "Man, I just love this game. I'd play for food money. It was the sounds and smells. You ever hold a ball and glove up to your face?"

"Shoot, I'd play for nuthin'." COMMENT: Which brings to mind how times and baseball have changed. Last week Alex Rodriguez, the Seattle Mariners' 18-year-old top draft pick, said, "Baseball is in my blood, but unfortunately money is a part of it. It kind of takes all the fun out of it, to tell the truth."

PARTING SHOT

Talk show host Maury Povich: "None of the daytime talk shows would be on the air if the states of Florida, Texas and California didn't exist. That's where every weird person alights."

And so it goes.

NEXT WEEK: Why has basketball become year round?, and Rick Putino does it again.

SQUIRREL SEASON OPENS AUGUST 21 STATEWIDE

Squirrel hunters will get their first chance to be in the woods Saturday, August 21, as the Kentucky squirrel season opens throughout the state.

For the last few seasons, Kentucky had been split into two zones for squirrel hunting. The eastern zone consisting of about 35 counties in the southeastern portion of the state did not open for squirrels until Labor Day Weekend. The delayed opening in the southeast was designed to provide young squirrels an extra two weeks or so of growth before the season opened, because the breeding season in that region tends to lag behind the rest of the state.

During the December 1992 meeting of the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources (KDFWR) Commission, the commission voted to abolish the two squirrel zones and have a single set of season dates for squirrel hunting statewide. This year's complete season dates are August 21 through October 31, and November 23 through December 31.

The daily bag limit on squirrels remains the same at six. The fun of fishing By Scott Patton and made possible by these sponsors:

Scott Patton fishes the BASS-MASTERS Tournament Trail. He won the 1989 B.A.S.S. Federation State Championship. He was named 1987 Hydra Sports Points Champion.

Scott is sponsored by TRACKER Marine, Burnett Brothers Boat Mart and Triple Fish.

One thing I've learned is that if you go back to the lake expecting to catch fish the same way you caught them the last time you were there, you're probably not going to be very satisfied with that day on the water. That is especially true during a tournament situation. I will go out and try to pattern fish so I can catch them on the same lure at the same time of day. Practice is a critical element in a tournament. Let's say, for example, you find fish on a Thursday and you go back to those fish on a Sunday and try to fish the area the same way you fished it Thursday and you end up with negative results. You say to your partner, "I don't know what happened. There were fish everywhere the other day."

What happened is something has changed the environment of the fish. It may have been falling water. The water where you found these fish has dropped 6 inches which created a moving pattern. Another example could be rising water. The change that affect the environment of the fish are what should be paid attention to but, how the bass react to these changes should be your biggest concern. You have to fish the fish. When you are pre-fishing for a tournament and you locate an area that has fish in it, you may not want to release any of the fish back in that area. Keep them temporarily in the livewell and transport them to another area of the lake. This way a fish that isn't wise to you will not be on that stump or other cover. Another fish will move in a lake that spot. If an area is holding fish and conditions change, the area may be replenished by new fish.

Sometimes you find a nice-looking area that is holding fish and you can catch them on say a spinnerbait by throwing it into the bushes and buzzing it back. You only catch a few and then leave it thinking that you didn't hurt the area. But what you may not realize is that there may have been 15 or 20 more fishermen fishing that area as well. So when you come back a few days later the fish would have gotten gun shy and you may have to flip a jig to these fish since they will probably be a lot less active.

There are a lot of possibilities to consider and a lot of changes that may occur but with some detailed attention you can clue into what's happening in the fish's environment. Keep a positive attitude. Keep casting, and KEEP FISHING!!!

COONHUNTING

by Darrin Howell

The time of the year I really love is arrived. Like fall for two reasons. The first is the scenery, the second reason, my favorite hobby, coonhunting season is in that is when you can kill raccoons for their furs and not get too fat. Raccoons are not just dark brown with shades of light brown and black brown rings around their tails.

Raccoons have very sharp claws and teeth for defense against dogs. The most unique thing about a coon is the mask. They have black rings around their eyes that look like a mask. The few coons around here are smart and hard to force. That's why I'd rather hunt downstate. We arrived Thursday in September about our 7 p.m. I'd three inches off coonhunting. I was going with Gary Hamilton, his dad Bob and Uncle Donald Ray. Donald Ray and Bobby Hamilton are two of a kind and two of my favorite people to hunt with. Donald is a short stocky guy with gray hair and is a real comedian on hunting trips. Bobby takes his hunting a little more serious.

It was a tiresome four hour drive to a small town in Henry County where our campsite was located. We arrived stopped once to eat and once to gas. I slept almost all the way.

On arrival in Henry County, we unloaded the dogs from the big white dog box in the back of the truck. The box has separate sections and doors. We fed the dogs all they could eat. The campsite is my favorite place while on hunting trips because that's exactly time you can't do without. There's a white, sturdy, metal support structure. There is a barrel with one of the sides and just inside a canvas tent. We had a few things in the tent, including a cooler, and we left. Then we took out a radio map and unfolded it.

Finally nighttime came. The dogs were fed and ready to go. We got in the dog box back in the truck. We put our guns and radios in the truck. It is important to have a radio when you're out because you don't know how long you will going to be in those hills. The light I use is a Wheat Mining light which will burn about sixteen hours. It has a red battery that is about seven inches long and four inches wide that is held by a leather belt with a black cord running to a red headpiece with an extra bright bulb. We headed off for a little dark hollow named Swens Creek, which was about fifteen miles from our campsite. A hollow is the area between two hills.

On arrival in Swens Creek, we stopped at the first cornfield. The cornfield is about two miles long and full of hard yellow ripe corn which is ready to harvest. The corn was between four and ten feet tall. The raccoons live in corn when it is brown and rustling in the wind. Much to my surprise, we saw a coon cross the road. Donald was jumping up and down saying "Turn Speck loose!" I think that's the only dog he's got.

I was the first out of the truck. I ran to the back of the truck, let the tailgate down and turned eight dogs loose. The first dog the coon in the hollow was named Timmy.

Timmy ran to the coon in the hollow. Then the coon started running. We knew this was no ordinary coon. It seemed like an end-of-the-world coon. It started running. We knew this was no ordinary coon. It seemed like an end-of-the-world coon. It started running. We knew this was no ordinary coon. It seemed like an end-of-the-world coon. It started running.

was an old barn beside the field and Gary and I got under the barn to stay dry. The dogs ran the coon right beside us. About that time Bobby joined us under the barn and told us the coon would not climb a tree.

A few minutes later, the dogs started barking harder. They were gaining on the coon. Before I knew what was happening, they had caught the coon in the middle of the field.

A great battle happened out there and we wanted to see it. Gary and I took off running through the field until we reached the fight. The coon, all cut and torn, was still alive. It started crawling away and then all the dogs went back in on it. They fought for about ten minutes until my female walker got the coon by the back of the neck and killed it. We grabbed the coon and made out way back out of the field.

When we made it to the truck, we noticed that the dogs were covered with blood and cut in several different places. We loaded the dogs back up and looked at the coon. It would weigh about twelve to fifteen pounds. We skinned the coon and called it a night. Back at the campsite, Gary's dad Bobby fixed us a great supper. We all had down for a good night's sleep.

The next day, we went to a place called Fox Farm. It got its name because there are two hollows lying together when we made it there. I turned my black and tan male dog out "with a shocking collar around his neck" and he ran a deer for about two minutes, until I shocked him, then he came back to me, so that wasn't too bad. Shocking collars are specially made for training dogs that will run underside game by electrifying them while they run deer, foxes, rabbits, weasels, etc. Eventually, the dogs will stop running this game after being shocked enough. You can hunt them without the collars.

The next to follow we were going to start the dogs in was only about two miles long but it was infested with raccoons. We turned all the dogs loose and put tracking collars on Old Speck and Spot. Tracking collars are devices used in keeping up with the dogs. It has a metal detector with a box which you hold with a long antenna. You hold it in different directions and when it beeps the fastest, that's the direction the dogs are in.

We walked all the dogs together about a half a mile and sat down to listen. We only sat about two minutes when we heard Spot give a long bark up on the hill to the left of us.

Bobby said, "Spot smells a coon." Then I heard Fanny, my Walker female. She smelled the coon, too. The dogs kept barking harder and harder and I knew the track was getting hotter. Then we heard Old Speck and we knew the coon was freed. That is the only time he barks, the way a coonhound should be. He had beat all the dogs once again. At this time I was starting to realize why Spot was a two thousand dollar hound.

We started walking once more. It only took us about fifteen minutes to get to him this time. It was my turn to do the shooting. When I made it to the tree, we tied Speck up once more. I got above the tree with the coon. I shined my light up in the tree and saw a coon. I looked around and found two more in the top of that tree. I could hardly believe it—three coons up one tree!

I chose the coon I wanted first and took careful aim, but when I shot, I hit the coon in the head and killed it instantly. The coon fell out without a fight. I wasn't about to waste another coon. I told Bobby to come up the hill and shoot the next one out, but he said that was okay and told me to take another one.

I aimed carefully once more at the coon's rear end and shot. It was a direct hit. He started walking back down the tree and came all the way out, the tree on the dogs. It was truly a great fight. I thought the raccoon was going to get the best of the young dogs. That's when Speck broke the chain he was tied to and went at the coon. He instantly grabbed the critter by the neck and the fight was over. We walked off and left one raccoon to rest the next time we would be in there.

When we made it to the truck, we decided we had done pretty good for that night. We loaded the dogs up and headed back for camp. I was really tired when we made it back to the camper. I had down for a good night's rest before the long trip home.

I woke up the next morning and Bob and Donald Ray had the place cleaned up. All the stuff along with the dogs was loaded. They wanted to get home, but I could have stayed forever. But, all good things must end and I knew I would be back.

We stopped at McDonald's and got some breakfast. That helped me out a lot. I was asleep before we made it to Morehead and slept all the way home. When I got home, I couldn't believe the cuts and scratches on my hands as I tied them up and fed them. It was truly a fun trip for me and an educational trip for them.

CHANGING RETRIEVE SPEEDS MAY MAKE BASS STRIKE

When bass aren't biting, you can either speed up your retrieve to cover more water, or you can slow down to cover less water more thoroughly. That's the advice of former world bass fishing champion Ken Cook, who, as a fulltime tournament angler, has had plenty of opportunities to try both.

"When bass aren't biting," says Cook, a member of the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff, "you obviously have to change tactics. Sometimes, something as simple as changing the speed of your fishing will begin to trigger strikes."

Cook suggests fishing faster in the spring and fall months when the water temperature is changing, and fishing slower in the summer or winter when the water temperature is very hot or cold.

"We believe two of the most important reasons bass strike lures are because they're feeding, and also purely out of reflex," explains Cook. "So these are what we try to stimulate with our retrieves."

"When you retrieve a lure very rapidly, you're usually getting a reflex strike. I believe this is normally what happens when we use spinnerbaits and crankbaits because the bass really doesn't have time to study the lure before it's gone."

"With slower retrieves, such as with plastic worms, jigs and topwater lures, I believe we're getting closer to a feeding strike. The fish has ample time to actually study the lure."

When you fish fast and cover a lot of water, explains the Evinrude pro, eventually you'll encounter one or more bass that simply cannot resist hitting a lure as it zips past. Because you're making more casts, you let more fish see the lure.

"On the other hand, when you really slow down, you don't cover more areas, but you fish more carefully. You cast to all the targets instead of skipping some. This way, you're also putting your lure in front of more bass, and that's the key to getting strikes."

Cook says he sees many anglers continue to fish the same way hour after hour, even though they aren't getting any strikes. Unless anglers are absolutely certain an area does hold bass, he strongly suggests changing tactics.

"You can make a lot of changes," says Cook, "including trying different lures, or even running to an entirely different part of the lake."

"One of the easiest things to do, I believe, is simply speeding up or slowing down the way you're fishing. Very often, this is all it takes to start getting strikes."

Health care facility holds open house

Ribbon cutting ceremonies at Water Gap marked the formal opening of Appalachian Regional Healthcare's newest innovation in health care delivery for Floyd County and the Prestonsburg area.

Located near the intersections of US 23 and Route 80, ARH's Division of Home Services has established a central campus from which its home-based service offered by Appalachian Regional Healthcare may be obtained.

The Prestonsburg Campus houses both The Floyd County Homecare Store (managed by Nathan Griffith), providing a full line of oxygen, durable medical/hospital equipment, nutritional supplements and medical-surgical supplies for home use; and the Prestonsburg Branch of The McDowell Home Health Service (coordinated by Donna Thomas, R.N.) providing full service, multi-discipline home health services including nursing, home health aides, physical therapy, speech therapy, home and community based waiver services, medical social services and other specialized home-based services.

Guests during the ceremony and open house included Dr. Forest Calico, president of Appalachian Regional Healthcare; members of ARH's Board of Directors and senior corporate staff; Leslie Rogers and Anthony Cerro, administrator and assistant administrator of the Division of Home Services, respectively; the Prestonsburg Chamber of Commerce; representatives of community health care and social service organizations; staff from sister Appalachian Regional Hospitals and Divisions and visitors from the community.

Services may be obtained from these agencies by calling the Floyd County Homecare Store at 874-9562 and the McDowell Home Health Agency, Prestonsburg Branch, at 874-9331.

Work-at-home schemes are top consumer concerns

According to a survey of the nation's Better Business Bureaus, work-at-home schemes are perennial problems, but have been unusually troublesome recently as consumers turn to these supposed job opportunities as an income source in a weak economy. The survey results were released at a recent U.S. Senate hearing on work-at-home and business opportunity scams.

Work-at-home advertisements usually are nothing more than plays set up by the advertiser to sell information to unsuspecting consumers leading them to believe they can begin their own successful business from their home. No actual employment is offered.

"Work-at-home schemes have consistently ranked in our top five inquiries throughout 1992 and 1993," said Tracey McLamney, President/CEO of the Better Business Bureau of Central & Eastern Kentucky, Inc. "Nationally, Bureaus received over 176,000 inquiries last year alone. But despite warnings and on-going education efforts, consumers are invariably lured by false promises of huge profits for easy, at-home work."

BBBs reported that work-at-home schemes continue to proliferate because of the weak economy and high unemployment, the lure of easy money, a popular belief that all work-at-home offers that appear in print are true, and the fact that respected publications still accept the ads.

The vast majority of "jobs" offered by work-at-home companies are for stuffing envelopes. In fact, 96 percent of the Bureaus that responded to the survey regularly advise consumers on the pitfalls of envelope-stuffing opportunities. Other popular fraudulent offers include assembling crafts, tracing unclaimed funds, reading books for pay, and selling lists and directories of work-at-home opportunities.

"Unfortunately, many people who are falling prey to these schemes are ones who, due to circumstances, are prevented from finding employment outside of the home, and they are the ones who can least afford to lose the money," McLamney said.

The survey showed the largest group victimized by the scam is stay-at-home mothers. Other home-bound groups particularly vulnerable to work-at-home promotions include senior citizens and persons with disabilities. Bureaus reported that the unemployed, people looking for a second-income and college students also have been taken in by scam operators.

Ninety-three percent of the Bureaus surveyed said that work-at-home offers appear in classified ads, often in free weekly newspapers. Many Bureaus noted that the ads are not placed by local companies. Instead, companies advertise in different states then where they are located to escape the scrutiny of local law enforcement agencies. Other, less-common methods of production include direct mail, cable television and directories of work-at-home opportunities.

Despite receiving thousands of inquiries and complaints annually, law enforcement officials rarely crack down on the operators that run the scams, because the amount of money involved is relatively insignificant. Only 23 percent of BBBs report any actions taken by law enforcement agencies, usually citing crack-down efforts by the U.S. Postal Inspection Service.

While consumers who send away for craft assembly kits may lose fees of hundreds of dollars, the majority of work-at-home scheme victims lost under $40.

"That doesn't seem like a significant amount until you realize that it probably represents the week's grocery money to many victims," stated McLamney. "We often ask, who commits the greater crime—a person who steals $40,000 from one company, say in a bank robbery, or a company that steals $40 from 1,000 individuals, like many work-at-home companies do?"

Most complaints against work-at-home companies allege never receiving the promised product and misrepresentation of earnings possibilities. Consumer complaints involving craft assembly are likely to claim that the company would not buy the product back because it claims the work does not meet the company's "standards."

In the survey, several Bureaus attributed the continued success of these fraudulent companies to consumers who not complain or seek refunds. Consumers often write off the amount as insignificant or they may be too embarrassed to admit to being taken.

However, BBBs report that those victims who take time to complain often receive their money back, if the company is still in business.

"If a consumer has lost money to a work-at-home scheme, we encourage them to file a complaint with the BBB," McLamney said. "More important though, we recommend consumers check out the company before doing business with it. Remember to always investigate before you invest." The Better Business Bureau of Central & Eastern Kentucky, Inc. can be reached at 1-800-866-6668, Monday-Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Bradley retires after 31 1/2 years of service

Fond farewell

Science

Maytown Elementary mixed 4th and 5th grade spent an exciting fun-filled morning at Prestonburg Community College touring the various science departments. The students were actively involved in various learning situations. Later in the afternoon they visited the jail and detention center.

Miss Bonnie J. Bradley retired from her employment with the state government at the Department for Social Insurance Office on North Lake Drive, Prestonsburg, at the close of business on July 30.

Bradley began employment with the old Department of Economic Security on March 19 as a clerk typist. She excelled in her duties over the years and worked her way up through the ranks to a Pr. Casework Specialist in which capacity she has served since December 16, 1964. The Pr. Casework position is the highest level that can be attained in the casework field.

A farewell breakfast was given in her honor on her last day of employment at the D.S.I. Office on North Lake Drive. A retirement dinner is planned at Jenny Wiley Lodge August 6.

Ms. Bradley plans to rest awhile and then do some traveling and some volunteer community work.

Nominations to be taken at Left Beaver Fire District

The Left Beaver Fire Protection District will take nominations and elect members to the Board of Trustees at their regular meeting August 10 at 6:30 p.m. at Station No. 2 at McDowell. All meetings are open to the public. Board members meet regularly on the second Tuesday of each month.

Registrations being accepted for Lambers CPA Review course

Registrations are still being accepted for the 12-week Lambers CPA Review course, sponsored by Morehead State University's Department of Accounting and Economics, to be offered at the University's Egg Sandy Extended Campus Center, Prestonsburg.

The course, which begins August 10, will prepare those enrolled for the November 1993 certified public accountant examination, according to Dr. L. K. Williams, MSU professor of accounting and coordinator for the video review course.

The $975 cost of the program includes videotape checkouts for at-home class make-ups, textbooks, an intensive review two weeks prior to the CPA exam and an unconditional repeat of the course.

Also included in the course cost is PassWare, an IBM-compatible software program to supplement out-of-class study.

Established in 1966, the Lambers CPA Review has a 78 percent pass rate and is considered by many to be the nation's number one video review in the field, Dr. Williams said.

Registration and additional information may be obtained by calling Dr. Williams at (606) 783-2911 or Joe Pitts, vice president of marketing for The Resource Network, toll-free at 1-800-259-0033.

MSU graduate classes held at Pikeville College

The cost per credit hour for graduate courses is $103 for all students taking classes at MSU's regional locations—whether they reside in Kentucky or not.

Mail-in registrations, accompanied by tuition and fee payment, will be accepted postmarked through August 12.

Specific information on courses or registration may be obtained locally by calling Dr. Elizabeth Dowdy, site coordinator for the consortium, at 432-9320. Piano students honored for recent achievements

Piano students of Roma Lou McClanahan's Piano Studio were recently honored for their achievements.

Heather McCoy, daughter of Mark and Kathy McCoy of Boldman, was selected as Student of the Year at the studio. She is a student at Betsy Layne Elementary.

Other students honored were Sarah Swiger, daughter of Herbie and Darlene Swiger of Ivel; Tiffany McCoy, daughter of Jerry and Nancy McCoy of Arrowhead Estate; Amber Adams, daughter of Dewey and Gwen Layne of Raccoon; Rachel Rasnick, daughter of David and Freda Rasnick of Pikeville; Daphne McCoy, daughter of Mark and Kathy McCoy of Boldman.

Honored students

Roma Lou McClanahan recently honored her piano students for their achievements. They were recognized for completing requirements in progress, practice, attitude and attendance.

A "class" act

Students look on as PHS Assistant Principal Terry Stewart (seated, far left) presents a certificate of appreciation to Prestonsburg City Councilman Jerry Fannin, (seated, center) for providing picnic tables for the school's beautification project. Area businesses were asked to contribute to the project. The students did most of the work. Steve Allen serves as project director.

Size more fiddles

Dave Sizemore appeared recently on the evening of June 25 as a guest fiddler ending the week's celebration of Appalachian culture and traditions during MSU's Appalachian Celebration. Uncle Dave, as he is respectfully called by those who know and appreciate him, is a walking library of old fiddle tunes which have almost been forgotten by the younger fiddle players of today. He appeared along with Alford Bailey, J.P. Frayle, Leo Blair (music professor at MSU) and Ron Dobler (English professor at MSU), along with various other musicians from Eastern Kentucky who study and practice old-time Appalachian music. Pictured, from left, are Mr. and Mrs. J.P. Frayle, Dave Sizemore, Ron Dobler (in background), Marvin Carroll, and Alford Bailey.

KET telecourses available to area college students for Fall '93

Students registering in August for fall classes at Ashland Community College and other Kentucky colleges and universities should keep the 1993 KET fall telecourse schedule in mind.

KET telecourses are fully accredited college-level courses convenient for students who have to juggle their college schedule with other commitments such as work and family. They are broadcast on KET so that the majority of class time takes place in the student's own home. Students meet on campus periodically throughout the semester to discuss course material with the professor and to take exams.

KET offers telecourses to college students as part of its commitment to broaden the educational opportunities available to all Kentuckians. KET has been airing the telecourses for 15 years with the guidance of the Kentucky Telecommunications Consortium. Total enrollment now exceeds 54,000.

In total, 24 Kentucky colleges and universities will offer some or all of the 1993 KET spring telecourse schedule. To find out which courses each particular Kentucky university or college is offering and to receive a broadcast schedule, call (800) 432-0970.

Poison Oak

Clyde Pack

RX: GREEN TOMATO JUICE

In the summertime, when all the leaves are green, the redbirds sing, and the skies are blue... people get poison ivy.

Well, those aren't exactly Roger Millers' lyrics, but it's no less true. When I was a kid, it seem like poison ivy would come to the house, knock on the door and look me up. By this time in the season, I'd no doubt already have had several bouts with the pesky stuff.

However, even though I had some pretty nasty cases, I can't ever remember having to go to the doctor with it. While I don't remember any particular cure that mom used, I suspect she had stored away somewhere a few of the old home remedies like those that some of our readers have passed along over the years.

Fortunately, we don't have to rely on such cures in these modern times, but one lady suggested that the itch from poison ivy (or poison oak) can be relieved by rubbing garlic juice on the affected area.

Another wrote that her mother would do the same thing with the juice from a green tomato.

Other things that folks have told me that people once used to cure the unwanted rash include lather from home-made lye soap, a mixture of molasses and baking soda; a mixture of Epsom salts and water (or buttermilk); juice from a milkweed; ordinary white shoe polish; saliva from a sucking calf; and rubbing the itchy spot with a fresh banana peel.

Looking back, one had to wonder what medical properties are contained in stuff like garlic or lye soap or milkweed. At the same time, though, what difference did it make what made it work, as long as it did.

Since from the time school was out until it started back again we generally went barefooted, another summertime problem with which we had to contend, and for which there must have been tons of cures, was the bee sting.

While bee stings should be considered serious business and not be taken lightly, fortunately, at least in our case, they were never more than a nuisance. And, just as with poison ivy, readers have submitted many old-time cures (and maybe even a few new-time ones) to help take away the pain.

This list of ordinary, easy to find cures, includes prepared mustard (the yellow stuff in a jar); tobacco juice; plantain leaves; apple cider; a mixture of honey and dirt from a dried-up dirt daubers nest; and a mixture of clay mud and salt.

A couple of more "new" cures involved dissolving two aspirin in water and spreading it on the sting, and securing a Tum or Rolaid onto the painful area. The last time I got stung, I used a new cure, too. I made a paste with water and meat tenderizer, dabbed it on and the pain went away. Honest.

Even though, as an Eastern Kentucky coal miner's kid, I generally enjoyed those long, hot, dog-days of summer back in the forties, there were times—especially when I'd encounter the business end of a bee or suddenly, during a heated game of kick-the-can or cowboy and Indians, find myself standing waist deep in a patch of poison vine—that weren't much fun.

Ratliff carves history in wood

by Dana "Dan" Lyons
Contributing Writer

As a young boy, Terry Ratliff of Stephens Branch had a dad and some uncles who took him through the woods hunting and hiking. He learned to feel as one with the area's often unseen world of stately trees of all species, and to respect and admire nature's many practical gifts.

Then, somewhere along the line, around the time he was working as a psychologist for Mountain Comprehensive Care in Pike and Floyd counties, a solid dream took hold of his future—a dream to build his own log house.

Early on, his house was just a simple one in his mind. But the finished product has evolved into a large, elaborate, extremely rustic structure that sits in a place invulnerable to frigid winter winds. The area absorbs about three and a half hours of direct sunlight at this time of year, from 10:30 a.m. until 2 p.m.

"When I got interested in building my house, the things I was taught as a child were easy to re-learn," Ratliff said.

When he officially started building his house on his 12-acre tract of mountaintop property, he hoped to build among the trees without disturbing any of them. Fire season was too great a threat for that. Even so, his house is nestled among old, towering oaks, hickories, poplars, and many other native species. The framing of his house took about 60 poplars.

It wasn't long after he started his ambitious project in '81, which would see one huge log per day properly positioned, that he decided to take his newly acquired knowledge of wood construction to a new level.

"You could say I eat and sleep sawdust and wood chips," he said with a smile.

Ratliff was helped by his dad and his neighbor, Lawrence Ousley. He recalled they worked really hard for a while, and then let the project rest for a few months. He also was inspired by his friend Jake Messer, who built his own log home; by the late Irvin Messer Sr., a renowned hickory cane chair maker from Knott County; and by the late Buck Justice of Bucks Branch.

During those times, as he started on the house, he was beginning to strive to become a wood craftsman. He decided to build articles people could "live with, feel comfortable with, and that time just improves them."

So he became proficient with the process of woodwork. He took the choice tree from the woods, split it with his hatchet and froe, cured the wood, and then fashioned the furniture using a drawknife, spokeshave, and shaving horse.

"In the early '80s I went to a lot of craft shows, often with 10,000 people in attendance," he said. "I'd pick up one or two patrons at a time."

Instead of customers, Ratliff has patrons. He explained the difference. A patron is a person who will buy one chair or other article from him about once a year as they add to their collections.

Early in his career as a chairmaker and professional woodworker, his dad asked him if there was anyone he knew or ever heard of who was making a living only by making wood artifacts.

He answered his dad, by telling about a man in California who was aged 80 at the time. The man had sold woodcrafts for many years, selling chairs for $5,000 each. What's more, the man had back orders for 20 years of continued production.

Ratliff says his plan was to have his woodworking career going well by the time the house was built, or by the time he was 35. His woodworking career is healthy indeed, and his family has lived in the house since 1985, though he says it's still in the construction phase, and he's now 38.

"My little girl used to tell them at school she lived in the log house up on the hill that's not built yet," he said. His wife Deborah, daughter Carrie, 12, and son Joseph, 8, enjoy the house and property, said Terry. "It's a good place for pups and kids."

He is a member of the Kentucky Guild of Artists and Craftsmen. One of his most impressive accomplishments was when his work was shown at the Governor's Breakfast prior to the Kentucky Derby in '82, '83, and '84.

His approach to building his house and all the wooden craft items he has built is to do the construction the way things were built prior to the machinery and mass production age.

"The goal of mass production has been to turn out as many as you can, while the craftsman strives to make everything as good in quality as possible," he stressed.

One of his criteria for building a piece of furniture is the method of joining wood the old-fashioned ultra-longlasting way. He referred to the days when bridge building projects started out with great hewn stones. He has begun some stone carving and sculpting projects of his own.

The Ratliff family like their decor in the home to be rustic wherever possible. That's why there's a '50s era kitchen cabinet, a '40s kitchen sink, and a '30s gas stove bought in an estate auction in Ohio, joining their modern side-by-side refrigerator.

Don't get the impression they're escapists. According to Terry, modern conveniences are great. Such as the fax machine and other business aids in an office in the front of their home, and used by his wife in her position as consultant with Travelers Insurance Company.

Terry Ratliff lives in the can-do mode. He will be featured on Kentucky Education Television in September.

It seems he takes the same care with any type of project he chooses to tackle, such as unique dog houses—a stone dog house with a dome shaped roof, and a log dog house. He jokingly suggested he's planning to build a third dog house out of straw so he can reconstruct the setting for The Three Little Pigs.

And he's just the man for the job.

Dear Dr. Bubba: I'm a 37-year-old male and recovering from a very messy divorce after 17 years of marriage. This woman with whom I had spent the best years of my life has now taken everything we ever owned together—the house, both cars, the stereo, all my favorite albums—even the dog, which she never liked but took anyway just to spite me. I feel so betrayed. I loved her so very much. We were everything to each other and spent at least three very happy years.

GRAVEYARD OR PET CEMETERY?

by Kim Frasure

One day a week or so ago, I had to beg, plead and finally demand that Ashley take Tiffany swimming.

Not only was I cramping her style by making her have her little sister "tag along," but I was also making her life miserable.

"She'll embarrass me, mom. I know she will," Ash snarled for 30 minutes.

Finally, like a flashlight going off, it came to me. "Look, it's like this: either your sister goes along this one time or you, my dear child, may go no more," I told Ashley!

"Fine, great, wonderful, she can go!" I heard with real enthusiasm. Not!

Then came the dishing out of the rules.

#1. Both of you have to be nice to each other (as well as everyone else). That got me two sets of rolling eyes.

#2. Tiffany, no running around the pool, walk and mind your sister.

Well, Ashley loved that one. Her pretty whites were gleaming and she crossed those arms and let out her usual "puh!"

#3. Don't get over there and have a knock-down, drag-out, hair-pulling fight like you do at home.

#4. Share the money equally and have a good time!

As they drove away with friends, my nerves were on end. I prayed they would get along for the four hours they'd be out of sight.

Then I started the normal what ya! Drove myself nuts, I'll tell ya!

But time passed quickly and I was there to pick them up. Ash was in clear view as I was parking the car.

As I approached the fence, looking through all the children, none favored my youngest child. Hating to embarrass my oldest child, I quickly forgot and let out a horrendous scream. "Ashleigh, Ashleigh Nicole," now she looks in my direction. "Where's your sister?"

As Ashleigh's face became more red from my scream than the sun, she pointed in Tiffany's direction. My heart was pounding and now I could see her.

As the girls got into the car, all was quiet. I was about to chalk it up to exhaustion and then it started.

Ashleigh: "I told you she'd embarrass me and she did mom."

"Now, now, I'm sure she didn't embarrass you bad. What did she do?" I asked.

"Well, you know those drinks you can get at the strand. Well, Tiffany, you get them here too. But Tiffany, in front of 'all' my friends got up to the counter and when the girl said, 'Can I help you, honey?' Tiffany goes 'Yeah, I'll have a Pet Cemetery.'"

"The girl looked at her real weird and said, 'Excuse me. A what?'"

"Tiff said it again, a 'Pet Cemetery.' I said no, Tiff, you mean a graveyard. Everybody started laughin' mommie."

Needless to say, I was too after I'd heard this. But then 'ol Tiffany leans up front and says, "Well mommie, I knew it had something to do with death. I just didn't know what."

Oh well, it wasn't that bad, but it did lose her any more trips tagging along.

PART II

Rumor has it Uncle Herman does a mean Billy Ray Cyrus. You can bet it was a crowd pleaser.

Uncle Herman has always been one heck of a looker and Billy Ray Cyrus just better watch out if he's entering the entertainment business!

We Know That Sometimes, It Takes Great Pains To Get You To The Doctor.

That's why at King's Daughters' Medical Center, we've taken "great pains" (and put forth a lot of effort) to make sure the doctors you need are here for you. Doctors who have studied at prestigious medical centers. Doctors who know and perform the most up-to-date medical procedures. And most importantly, doctors who take "great pains" to provide the right care for their patients.

David Goebel, MD, is one of those doctors. He specializes in hematology/oncology (the treatment of cancer). Dr. Goebel graduated from the University of Kentucky School of Medicine in Lexington, Ky., and completed an internal medicine internship and residency at Temple University Hospital in Philadelphia, Pa. He completed his fellowship training in hematology/oncology at the University of Kentucky Medical Center's Markey Cancer Center. Dr. Goebel is certified by the American Board of Internal Medicine. He is joining the practice of Dana Johnson, MD, at Tri State Regional Cancer Center, 706 23rd St., Ashland, Ky.

17-YEAR-OLD HANGED DURING CIVIL WAR

by Jadon Gibson
November 26, 1863
Pulaski, Giles County, Tennessee
Dear Mother:
Oh, how painful it is to write to you; I have got to die tomorrow morning—to be hanged by the Federals. Mother, do not grieve for me. I must bid you good-bye forevermore. Mother, I do not fear to die.

Give my love to all.
Your son,
Samuel Davis
Samuel Davis, 17 years old, was the son of plain Tennessee folks. He loved to roam the woods and study birds, squirrels and other wonders of a world that was still new to him. He attended a military school in Nashville prior to the war where his personality was molded by teachers such as Kirby Smith and Bushrod Johnson who later became Generals in the War Between the States. Davis learned well the duty to obey orders and to cast cowardice from his inner being.

He was a confederate soldier and his duty was to furnish information to General Braxton Bragg of the movements and plans of the Federal army in Tennessee. A few months previously, in October of 1862, Bragg's men retreated from the Battle of Perryville, in Kentucky, by fording the Cumberland River at Pineville, ten miles inside the Bluegrass State, and rode into Tennessee.

Davis secretly visited the area of his home and talked with his mother and sisters on the Sunday prior to his capture. He spent the day in a thicket near the house where they brought him coffee, food and biscuits. Later he rode into the Union lines in search of information which he obtained from a federal officer in Nashville. As he was returning to Bragg's lines he was captured near Pulaski, Tenn., by the 7th Kansas "Jayhawkers" regiment under the direction of Union Gen. Granville Dodge.

Incriminating papers were found in his belt and under his saddle. Davis was sentenced to be hanged as a spy but was offered a pardon by Gen. Dodge if he would name the federal officer who divulged information to him.

Davis, among strangers and without counsel, refused the offer. The following morning he was taken from jail and put into a wagon containing his coffin. He looked toward the court house windows, where Confederate prisoners were confined, and bowed farewell. He then sat on the coffin and began his journey to the gallows and his appointment with death.

Upon reaching the gallows he asked the news of the day and was told of the Rebel's defeat at the Battle of Missionary Ridge. Davis expressed his regret saying, "The boys will have to fight on without me."

The courage of the young man worked on the feelings of his executioners who hoped something or someone would intervene and save the young rebel and to spare them from the cruel task of taking his life.

Their spirits lifted when a captain of Gen. Dodge's staff rapidly approached the gallows. "It is not too late," he said. "Gen. Dodge said if you will tell the name of the one who gave you the papers you may go free."

Davis slowly and carefully chose the words that sealed his fate. "If I had a thousand lives I would lose them all here before I would betray my friends or those helping the southland."

The sentence was then carried out. The hanging was held against Gen. Dodge who called Davis "a most admirable young fellow, with the highest character and strictest integrity." Many felt if the young man had been imprisoned, the information may have been secured and the young man's life spared.

The heroism of Sam Davis has been celebrated in verse and books. A monument to his memory has been erected at his home in Rutherford County, Tenn., where he died. A beautiful bronze statue of him adorns the grounds of the state capital in Nashville.

Young Sam added the following postscript to his letter prior to his hanging:

"Mother, tell the children all to be good. I wish I could see you all once more. Mother and father do not forget me. Think of me when I am dead but do not grieve for me. It will not do any good."

Father, you can send after my remains if you want to do so. They will be at Pulaski, Tennessee.

Real Beauty IS More Than Skin Deep, But Healthy Skin is NOT Superficial.

Caring for your skin is part of maintaining good health. Your skin is an organ, much like your heart or liver, and unhealthy skin can cause serious complications. In fact, in 1993, more than 700,000 people will be diagnosed with some form of skin cancer.*

Dermatologist Carol H. Cooper, M.D., is a specialist dedicated to skin health. She can provide medical and surgical treatments for the variety of skin disorders that affect adults and children. Treatments for acne, psoriasis and photaging. Skin surgery, wart removal and spider vein removal. And, of course, screenings and treatment for skin cancer.

As a dermatologist, Dr. Cooper urges you to pay attention to your skin. Early detection of skin disorders makes them easier to treat and cure. Examine your skin monthly. Look at your moles. Watch their shape, notice their color, and note when new ones appear. And ALWAYS be sure to wear sunscreen and avoid the sun at its most dangerous time—10 a.m. - 2 p.m.

Remember these skin health tips. And if you notice changes in your skin, see your doctor. Because concern for your skin isn't vanity, it's simply good health.

CROSSROADS

Barney died on a back road in Mississippi.

If you don't like blues, skip down a bit to where I'll tell you about it. Otherwise, there's more later.

From Memphis, it's a straight shot down our of friend 61 to Clarksdale, Mississippi. Generations of blues singers have penned lyrics about the crossroads — going down in the middle of the night with your rider by your side and waiting for someone to come. The place they're talking about is just north of Clarksdale, where U.S. Highway 61 and 49 go their separate ways — the place where the sharecroppers started the long, hard trek north to better jobs and cooler climes.

Heading south through the heat shivering off the highway, we got a taste of what "Mississippi Summer" really was.

Hot. The sun punishes anyone who stands still. Even with the breeze from traveling, the inside of the Viper (remember, black car and leather interior) was slowly poisoning us. A little toast, and we were breakfast.

Also, the effects of a long trip were beginning to grate on us. We'd been in the car for over a week, going everywhere, doing practically everything together. In close quarters like this, even the best of friends can start going for each other's throats. The sarcasm that's the base for both of our senses of humor started to not be so funny anymore. Add in the heat, and I could see the possibility of disaster on the horizon.

Enter the Comfort Inn, Clarksdale, Mississippi and its good-sized swimming pool. Magic, almost, the effect of a swim after riding with no top through 100+ degree heat.

After dinner at El Ranchero, a tacky sounding little restaurant that turned out to have superb barbecue ribs certified by the local ICU ward and fresh oysters on the half-shell shipped in from the Gulf, we went down to the Crossroads.

Like Eric Clapton suggested, I went down to the Crossroads and left down my knees. I waited for someone to come by, just like the legend said. I heard a horn honk.

Mary was at the wheel, telling me to get my foolish butt back in the car. The next day, we paid a visit to the Delta Blues Museum. Billy Gibbons, ZZ Top's guitarist and Clarksdale native, wanted to see a blues museum built. So, he and the band went on a short tour, raised the necessary funds, and whoop, there it was.

The museum traced the delta blues from its inception back in the juke joints of the 1920's with players like "Son" House and Willie Wilson, who blended gospel with a twelve-bar melody to create the form. Delta blues is an acoustic form of blues, usually played with a slide. The result is a sound that calls for smoke-filled taverns and dark back rooms where the patrons drank beer and listened to men half-sing, half-preach about hope, love, loss and betrayal. It's music torn straight from the heart and spread thick across the strings like warm butter.

It's real, and you won't find Bon Jovi doing cover versions.

"Son" House had a disciple of sorts, Robert Johnson, also born in Clarksdale, who ended up influencing just about every guitarist he ever came across. All the later blues musicians, Howlin' Wolf (who was a driving influence behind Led Zeppelin), Muddy Waters, B.B. King, Willie Dixon and on and on owe a lot of their licks to Johnson.

Robert Johnson died at age 26. He was poisoned in Clarksdale while on the way to play a gig. His old Gibson sits in a glass case at the museum for all to see.

A brief history of the blues: Blues was born in the Mississippi Delta, went north on 61, caught a train from St. Louis to Chicago and gave birth to a child named rock 'n' roll. The museum traced blues up to its current status, where it reaches into almost every kind of music.

Like a lot of people, I thought that delta blues was more of a historical form — something that musicians drew from, but most people didn't play anymore. I was wrong. Lots of blues players still use the delta style. There are frequent delta blues concerts in Clarksdale. One was scheduled for the day we were there, but it was cancelled due to the death of James "Son" Thomas, a local bluesman.

Concerts didn't concern us. We had other matters to attend to.

Barney. As I said a couple of weeks ago, after we heard about Julia Roberts and Lyle Lovett getting hitched, we decided this was one of the signs of Apocalypse. We had to sacrifice something to appease the angry gods. Barney was the victim.

Just at sunset, we took our purple pal to a back road in Mississippi. After a brief eulogy, we put him under the back tire. While Marty stood at the roadside taking pictures, I ran the Viper's engine up to about 4,000 r.p.m.

Without a bit of remorse, I dumped the clutch.

Pieces of Barney's head, gods of stuffing, and a small shower of purple fuzz flew. Marty then took his remain and skinned him so he could have a pelt for his office wall. Barney hangs in the Car and Driver office in Ann Arbor, Michigan, right below Marty's velvet Elvis. He gave me the Barney's foot, which I have on my keychain for good luck.

The world hasn't ended, so our little offering must have worked. (We have pictures of our little homicide, but since, with her impeccable sense of taste, won't let me run them. It's probably for the best.)

We'd found the cradle of the blues, but the highway kept winding southward. We couldn't stop until we found the end of the road, so, the next morning, we drove one more day through the heat towards New Orleans and the end of the line.

Barney is dead. Miss him. Later days.

Catalpa hornworms are out in full force

Here's a solution to a tree pest problem that many farmers and homeowners will happily heed.

Go fishing! Several specimens of catalpa hornworms have been turned in at the University of Kentucky's College of Agriculture recently, said Lee Townsend, Extension entomologist.

"This caterpillar feeds on catalpa trees and can defoliate them," Townsend said. "They may also leave the trees that they have defoliated and try to feed on other plants."

After they are full-grown, they crawl away to find a place to turn into a moth, said, but in the meantime they have devastated the leaves of their former home.

"The good news is that these catalpa worms make excellent bait for fish in Kentucky streams and rivers," Townsend said. "Fish like to munch on them as much as the worms like the catalpa leaves."

For farmers and others too busy to feed thousands of catalpa worms to the fish, they also can be controlled by using BT products or Sevin, he added.

Income from tobacco harvest jobs won't endanger most on public aid

As the tobacco-harvesting season comes to Kentucky, people on public assistance are reminded that they can usually boost their families' income with seasonal and part-time work without a significant loss of benefits—as long as they report the extra pay.

From now through September, Kentucky tobacco needs to be cut and housed. Recipients of Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) and Medicaid can add the short-term income, still receive the majority of their regular AFDC benefits and end up ahead, while also keeping their medical card.

"It's understandable that people may fear losing long-term assistance with a short-term paycheck, but that doesn't usually happen," said Commissioner Mike Robinson, whose Department for Social Insurance oversees eligibility for AFDC and Medicaid in Kentucky.

He said that because AFDC clients are allowed certain work-related deductions from pay, earned work expenses, child care costs, a percentage of earnings, etc., their benefit check is usually only somewhat reduced—and adds to the wages earned.

Free Colorado blue spruces

Ten free Colorado blue spruce trees will be given to each person who joins The National Arbor Day Foundation during August 1993.

The free trees are part of the non-profit foundation's Trees for America campaign.

The trees will be shipped postpaid at the right time for planting between October 15 and December 10 with enclosed planting instructions. The six to twelve inch trees are guaranteed to grow, or they will be replaced free of charge.

Members also receive a subscription to the Foundation's new magazine, Arbor Day, which includes regular features about tree planting and care.

To become a member of the Foundation and to receive the free trees, send a $10 member-ship contribution to Ten Blue Spruces, National Arbor Day Foundation, 100 Arbor Avenue, Nebraska City, NE 68401, by August 31.

Summertime humidity control

Kentucky summers usually mean two things—high humidity and increased air conditioner use. With some helpful hints, consumers can efficiently cool their house.

When evening temperatures drop down to the lower 70s, many home owners open their windows to cool off the house, said Bill Murphy, extension agricultural engineer at the University of Kentucky's College of Agriculture.

"However, it is actually more energy efficient to leave the windows closed at night, at least until nighttime temperatures drop to 65 degrees or below," Murphy said.

While outdoor temperatures may be lower than indoor settings, high humidity in the outside air will be absorbed by carpeting, wood and drywall. Thus, the next day the air conditioner must run longer to dry out the house from excess moisture.

In addition, closing windows at night also reduces the chances of mold growing in the house and leaves it more comfortable and drier the next day.

Generally, do not open windows for cooling until it gets below 65 degrees outside, Murphy said. Humid air at 65 degrees requires the same amount of energy to cool as air at 78 degrees with 50 percent relative humidity.

"If ventilation each day is needed for an extremely tight house, cooler nighttime hours to cool are still ideal," Murphy added.

Insecticides and weed killers put the heat on Summer is back and that heavy duty yard work—including use of harmful weed killers and insecticides—again is here. Because of their toxic nature, these sprays can cause illness in humans if used improperly and absorbed into the body. Symptoms can include nausea, excess sweating, vomiting, breathing difficulties and an irritation of the mouth or eyes.

Read directions carefully and use caution while spraying the lawn or garden to avoid any eye or skin contact. However, if you do become ill after using insecticides or weed killers, call the Kentucky Regional Poison Center of the Alliant Health System at (502) 589-8222 or 1-800-722-5725. The poison center is staffed 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.

Magazine scams becoming more common

Magazines could be described as a great American pastime. We read them when we are waiting for appointments, while passing the time during slow moments, and we read magazine articles for both enjoyment and research. There are magazines available on practically every conceivable subject, thus enhancing their appeal to the general public. But what happens when unscrupulous firms engage in the sale of magazines to the public?

The Better Business Bureau of Central and Eastern Kentucky, Inc. warns consumers to exercise caution in selecting a firm from which to purchase magazines. There are several clearinghouses that can obtain great discounts for the consumer and provide assistance with billing/shipping disputes. Unfortunately, there are also several firms involved in misleading and unethical business practices.

One such practice is the telephone magazine scam. Telephone solicitors call consumers offering "free," "pre-paid," or "special" magazine subscriptions. Often, when consumers say "yes" to the offer they do not realize they have obligated themselves to years of monthly payments for magazines they may not really want or could purchase elsewhere for less. A Lexington consumer who contacted the Better Business Bureau about one such firm stated, "I feel that the information given to me was misleading and there was no mention of a 29 month time period in which these subscriptions would last." Shortly after speaking to the telephone solicitor, this consumer received a bill for $760 from the firm. The consumer is currently pursuing a complaint with the BBB.

Often, magazines are sold door-to-door. School groups typically use this method to earn money for trips, uniforms or other fundraising efforts. However, many individuals sell magazines door-to-door for profit. "Traveling Sales Crews" often lure young people into traveling from state to state and selling magazines using misleading sales tactics such as claiming to need the money for a sick relative or selling magazines for "points" to put them through college.

"You should buy subscriptions only because you want the magazines, not in response to a 'plea,'" warns BBB president/CEO Tracey McAnney. "Before buying a subscription from any company, call the BBB first to obtain a business reliability report on the firm. Then, if you decide to pursue the offer, pay by check—never cash—made out to the company, not the individual. Additionally, make certain you have a receipt listing the item(s) purchased, the price paid, the company's name, address and phone number, and the name of the salesperson."

For any door-to-door sales transaction involving a purchase of $25 or more, the consumer has a "three day cooling off period." This Federal Trade Commission law protects consumers by giving them three business days during which they can cancel their contract if they choose. This three-day right of cancellation does not apply to purchases made at a company's normal place of business.

Further, for any magazine solicitation, Kentucky state statute (KRS 367.515-530) requires solicitors to register in each Kentucky county in which they intend to solicit prior to selling their products. Consumers should ask to see a copy of the firm's registration receipt or to have the registration number read to them if the solicitation is by phone. If a consumer makes a purchase from a firm who has failed to register, this Kentucky statute allows the consumer to "back out" of the transaction.

If you need information about a firm selling magazine subscriptions or have had problems with a sales transaction, call the Better Business Bureau at 1-800-866-6668.

Nutrition Facts For Women

(NAPAs)—Each year, approximately 245,000 women in the United States die of heart attacks and more than 90,000 die of strokes. These statistics are prompting some women to adopt new eating habits.

When preparing meals at home, it is important to choose foods carefully and check labels to make sure the meals you prepare are nutritionally balanced. When dining out, pick a restaurant with a varied menu. For example, Shoney's restaurants offer complete and balanced meals as well as their famous All You Can Eat Soup, Salad and Fruit bar, all at affordable prices.

Most food labels list the units per serving of six specific factors: calories, protein, carbohydrates, fat, cholesterol and sodium. Here's a quick overview of each and the effects they have on our health.

Calories: A calorie is a unit of heat energy derived by the body from food. Excessive calories lead to "burn" calories.

Protein: Protein is the basic structural material for all plants and animals. An excellent energy source, protein can be found in such foods as meat, fish, poultry, eggs, milk and cheese.

Carbohydrates: Carbohydrates are made up of multiple units of simple sugars connected to each other. When carbohydrates are eaten, they are ultimately broken down into glucose, a single sugar, which is then converted to energy. Some sources of carbohydrates are vegetables, cereal, rice, bread, pasta, nuts, fruits and grains.

Fat: Fat is a body substance which does not dissolve in water but does dissolve in organic substances. Fat is not all bad.
It is a concentrated form of energy. However, eating large amounts of fat can increase the chances of developing cancer of the colon, breast, uterus, bone and lung. It is also associated with an increased risk of heart attack or stroke.
Many authorities suggest that, for most people, the maximum percentage of daily calories from fat be 30 percent.

Cholesterol: Cholesterol contributes to the formation of sex hormones, skin oils and digestive juices.
Since it is produced naturally by the liver at a rate of one to two grams a day, it is really not necessary to take any additional cholesterol. Every food that comes from an animal contains some cholesterol. This includes eggs, cheese, meat, milk, poultry and fish.
Plants and plant oils do not contain cholesterol.
Too much cholesterol can lead to hardening of the arteries, which can slow or stop altogether the flow of blood. This can lead to a heart attack or stroke.

Sodium: Sodium is important in maintaining the balance of our body fluids. The body does not manufacture or store sodium, so it must be consumed in food. Healthy sources of sodium are vegetables, animal products and some drinking water. Unfortunately, most Americans get more than half their sodium from salt and from sodium compounds used to flavor processed foods. It doesn't appear that too much sodium causes high blood pressure, but excessive amounts can aggravate the condition in those already affected. Too much sodium can also upset the body's fluid balance.

Shoney's offers healthy selections of meats, pan-ades, seafood and vegetables. The family-style restaurant also has a Lean Choice menu selection to assist diners in making healthy choices. The chain has more than 800 restaurants located in 30 states, making nutritious dining convenient to many.

A key to good health is making informed and rational decisions. Whether dining at a restaurant or cooking at home, getting the facts about nutrition can make the difference in prolonging life.

Changes in our Schools

A Commentary

School-based councils exemplify democracy

By Carol Lamm
"It's about democracy, darling," says one strong supporter of Kentucky's school-based decision making councils. And democracy is indeed the foundation of this part of Kentucky's education reform effort.

School councils, composed of teachers, parents and the school principal, have the potential to improve our children's education precisely because the people who are closest to the children—the people who have to live with the decisions—are directly represented on the councils. That's democracy and it's the best way Americans know to make public decisions.

Since 1991, over 600 Kentucky schools have established school councils. By 1996, almost every school in the state will have a school-based decision making council. The only exceptions allowed are in districts with only one school and in those schools that meet their threshold for student success.

School councils have many responsibilities. Some of these responsibilities are: selecting a new principal when that position is vacant, consulting with the principal on the hiring of other staff, deciding whether to reallocate money when a staff position is vacant, and setting policy on curriculum, scheduling during the school day, discipline and extracurricular activities.

These are major decisions. To make good decisions, council members have to learn from other schools' experiences and from research. Just as important, council members need to learn from the rest of the community, in school and out of it. What is important to parents? What do our teachers think about the choices in front of us? What wisdom does our central office staff have to pass on? What do employers need?

Alongside the decisions about education that school councils can make, councils also have wonderful opportunity to make decisions about how the democratic process works.

As a minimum, school councils are required to follow the Kentucky Open Meetings Law. Everyone is welcome to attend council meetings and decisions are made in public, exactly as the law requires for other public bodies.

The Open Meetings Law is just a foundation. Because school councils are new, they can easily adopt new ways of involving the public.

School councils don't have to operate like fuddy-duddy public bodies where the elected officials sit behind tables at the front of the room and talk only to each other. Simply because they are new, it is easier for councils to establish a free, more open atmosphere for democratic discussion if they want to.

In order to get all their work done, councils just about have to establish committees. These committees can give many non-council members a chance to understand the school and its challenges more fully, in the course of doing important work.

For example, at Berea Community School, our council's Committee for Racial and Cultural Diversity has helped parents, teachers and administrators gain a far deeper understanding of the nature of racism and cultural diversity concerns in our school.

The committee drafted and secured school board approval of a new policy on racial harassment. With the council's approval, this committee has planned a professional development day at the beginning of the school year to help all our teachers learn how to help their students respect and appreciate differences. Because of this committee's work, education for all our students will be enhanced.

This council committee and others have brought parents into the school at a level that most had never experienced before. The parents involved now know far more about what goes on and why, how change happens in our school and how they can make a difference. This is truly democracy.

We know, from our own national history and from watching other countries, that the first few years of democracy can be a time of intense strain. No one can ever foresee all the questions that will come up or all the decisions that will need to be made. The rules need to be written while the first rounds of the game are being played. That's the way new democracies are born. There is inevitable fluidity brings dangers. There is danger that before the new democracy is set in place, those who opposed it in the first place will manage to twist things back to the old ways.

There is danger that the unsettled state of things will be so intensely uncomfortable that people will want to move back to more familiar territory to relieve the stress of it all.

It takes faith and vision to keep moving forward into unmappped territory. But pioneering has its rewards as well as its dangers.

After two years as a parent representative on a school council, I'm more hopeful than I was at the start of the journey that school councils will make a big difference in our children's education. Because so many more people are in on the decisions, the decisions are getting better. That's the reason for democracy in Kentucky education.

Carol Lamm is the director of the Berea York Institute of Berea College and first vice president of the Kentucky Association for School Councils. She recently completed two years as a parent representative on the Berea Community School Council.

High schools that work

Floyd County's high schools will participate this school year in an innovative program designed to raise the achievement levels of career-bound high school students.

The "High Schools That Work" program combines challenging academic courses and modern vocational studies. Nineteen Kentucky high schools are among more than 300 in the nation who are participating in the program.

"High Schools That Work" has two main goals — to increase mathematics, science, communication and vocational studies achievement levels of students; and to combine traditional college preparatory English, mathematics and science courses with vocational studies.

The core of the program is a curriculum that requires students to focus on a planned four-year program of vocational and academic studies featuring applied learning instructional strategies.

Participating schools follow a list of key practices, including establishing high expectations for students in academic and vocational classes, elimination of the general track, providing extra help for those who need it, involving parents in the process of planning students' programs of studies, and providing staff development, materials and time for academic and vocational teachers to collaborate on curriculum.

Libbi Hall, Coordinator of Vocational Education/Tech Prep for the Floyd County Schools, said the program is in line with the philosophy of the Kentucky Education Reform Act (KERA).

"High Schools That Work will make our schools more relevant," said Hall, site coordinator for the program in Floyd County. "The program works hand-in-hand with the initiatives of KERA, and the assessment components will be especially helpful as we look for ways to improve the performance of our schools."

"We really wanted to be involved in this, and I think it is a great program," added Hall.

SREB and staff from the Kentucky Department of Education will provide technical assistance, publications and a framework of strategies and curriculum components to help schools develop an action plan for the program.

Progress will be evaluated through reports from students, teachers and administrators, on-site reviews and scores from the National Assessment of Educational Progress and the Kentucky Instructional Results Information System (KIRIS).

The High Schools That Work program began in 1987 with 28 sites in 13 states. Four Kentucky schools — Fairdale High School, Russellville High School, Russellville Area Vocational Education Center and Trigg County High School — are already participating in the program. Fifteen Kentucky schools — including Allen Central High, Betsy Layne High, Floyd County Technical High, Prestonsburg High and South Floyd High — will join the consortium for the 1993-94 school year.

The program is coordinated by the Southern Regional Education Board, a consortium of 19 states working to improve educational advancement and social and economic life.

In Kentucky, the program is sponsored by the Department of Education and the Workforce Development Cabinet's Department for Adult and Technical Education.

Workshop

Floyd County teachers recently spent a week aligning the curriculum framework with the goals of the Kentucky Education Reform Act. Phil Paige, director of professional development for the Floyd County Schools, said the workshop was a success. School starts back August 20 for teachers and August 23 for students in Floyd County.

Pikeville College's Record Memorial gets facelift for new school year

What's new at Pikeville College? A $1.2 million face-lift for Record Memorial that will include elevators, classrooms, dance studios and offices. A new walkway that connects Sycamore Street and the Armington Science Building has also just been completed.

The new walkway will be the site for a flurry of activities that are planned for registration and orientation week. Registration will be held in the lobby of the Administration Building August 30-31 from 9 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 4 p.m.

A reception for incoming students with prizes and special gifts is planned for September 1 and will serve as a kick-off to a series of events intended to help make the transition from home to college life smoother.

"We try to plan things to help students avoid homesickness and spark new friendships," says Student Affairs representative Sadie Altman. "A lot of our kids have never been away from home before and we've found this goes a long way toward helping them become acclimated to life on campus."

The College has also planned a swimming party and cookout by the pool, a bowling night, a movie night, and a dinner for students where they are entertained and served by members of the faculty and staff. The "Big Brother/Big Sister" program which pairs an incoming student with an upper classman is also in effect during the week.

Special clubs like the Student Government Association (SGA) and Phi Beta Lambda (PBL) are also involved in the week's activities. Members of the PBL Club are still celebrating their success at the organization's national competition in Washington D.C. last month. The Pikeville group took seventh place in Business Communications. The group's "Partnership with Business" project headed by Judy Rollins, Billy Lowe and Marcia Little placed first in the nation. The project was conducted in partnership with the Pike County Chamber of Commerce in seeking Pikeville's re-evaluation as a certified city.

"The students were involved in conducting a survey," says PBL sponsor Howard Roberts. "They collected their data, tabulated statistics and reported results in a paper that took first place on the state and national levels. They were thrilled that they did so well. They took more awards than any chapter in the nation."

Full promises to be filled with excitement for Pikeville College students in sports as well. The Bears' season tips off on November 5 when they meet Ohio State Newark in Pikeville. The Lady Bears go into play at home on November 11 against Clinch Valley.

Coach Rick Scruggs is still elated over the selection of Pikeville College as the number one NAIA recruiting class in the nation by High Potential Basketball Recruiting Service.

"It's nice," said Scruggs. "It shows that we're making progress. It points out to us that people are recognizing that we're out here. High Potential is one of the most noted recruiting services in the nation, and they look at us and whom we're bringing in, and they're positive. It also signifies what a good institution we are academically when someone like John Stone picks Pikeville over some of the choices he had, not just in basketball but educationally."

"Pikeville College is growing and advancing with the increased demands of our student population," says Coordinator of Public Relations Suzanne Rasnick. "If people want to know more about the College we will be more than happy to give them whatever information they need. Personalized career counseling and information on financial assistance is available through the Office of Admissions at 432-9322."

Writing portfolio scores soar

Floyd County students improved dramatically on their writing portfolio scores from 1992 to 1993, according to the district's director of assessment, Phil Paige.

The average gain was higher than the average score the year before in all age groups, meaning most schools more than doubled their writing scores, said Paige.

In one instance, the 1993 score was nearly 15 times the 1992 score.

"There was a greater amount of attention paid to the portfolio development process at the school level," said Paige, when asked the cause of the dramatic increase. "There was more training provided to the teachers and more emphasis placed on the importance of writing portfolios. The credit belongs to the students, teachers, principals, writing cluster leaders and our coordinator of writing programs."

Patricia Watson, coordinator of writing programs, said the dramatic improvement was made possible by a lot of people working very hard.

"How well our students perform depends on how hard the teachers and students work and how well they use the resources we can provide them. This improvement in our scores indicates how hard our teachers and students are working," said Watson. "We are extremely pleased with this progress and hope to achieve the same kind of improvement again in 1994, 1995, and so on."

Paige said some portfolios are currently being re-scored to ensure consistent scoring, but that process will probably not have much effect on the final average scores for the district.

Paige declined to identify individual schools' scores until the re-scoring process is complete, but did release preliminary district average scores.

Portfolios are scored on the fourth, eighth and 12th-grade levels. The fourth grade average score increased by 15,906.1 points, up to 27,840.3 from 11,934.2 the previous school year.

Floyd County's eighth graders improved an average of 16,720.6 points, up from 13,518.6 to 30,239.2.

On the 12th-grade level, writing portfolio scores improved an average of 18,835.1 points, up from 14,808.4 in 1992 to 33,643.5 in 1993.

"These are dramatic success stories," said Superintendent Dr. Stephen Towler. "With progress like this, Floyd County is well on its way to meeting our goals for improvement which were set as part of KERA."

Campus Orientation...

Morehead students search for clues to education

Summer vacations will soon be over and officials at Morehead State University, like many other educational institutions nationwide, are making plans for students to return for the fall semester.

Activities for students will officially begin on Tuesday, Aug. 17, at 8 a.m., when residence halls open for the new term. The day's agenda includes a Student Government Association-sponsored cookout and a welcome-back dance.

On Wednesday, Aug. 18, students may attend an activity fair on the Fields Hall lawn. Information on joining a fraternity or sorority will be available along with numerous displays and games that provide for social interaction.

To familiarize new students with college life, an orientation program is scheduled Tuesday evening and will continue through noon on Thursday. Dr. Will Kiern, a motivational speaker who draws material from great philosophers, current contemporaries and his own experiences, will direct the discussion.

Dr. Kiern, campus minister at Oregon State University, is author of "The Education of CHARACTER: LESSONS FOR BEGINNERS." A frequent speaker on college campuses, his talk will cover such topics as residential life, communication skills, substance abuse and ethics and values as they relate to getting a college education.

To help them become more campus-oriented, new students will take part in the second annual scavenger hunt on Wednesday afternoon. The hunt, sponsored by Student Activities, utilizes clue cards to direct the participants to locations that play vital roles in student success.

A special orientation program has been set for two other groups with particular interests: non-traditional students will meet on Friday, Aug. 20, and international students on the following Friday, Aug. 27.

Registration for the fall semester is scheduled for Thursday and Friday, Aug. 19-20, from 8 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. on the main campus. Class schedules will be prepared in the major departments with fees processed at the Laughlin Health Building.

For those taking classes at an off-campus location, the process will be conducted at MSU's Ashland Area, Big Sandy and Licking Valley Extended Campus Centers and the Appalachian Graduate Consortium from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 19.

The registration period for regional classes at Jackson, Maysville and Whitesburg will be from 5 to 7 p.m., also on Aug. 19.

All MSU classes, including evening and off-campus, will begin meeting on Monday, Aug. 23.

There is a lot of structured activity during the first week of a new term, but MSU students also will have opportunities for "fun." An ice cream fest and street dance, co-sponsored by SGA and President and Mrs. Ronald G. Eaglin, is on tap for Sunday, Aug. 22, from 8 to 11 p.m. Among the entertainment programs scheduled are:

Humorist Kevin Hughes, Aug. 18, Button Auditorium, 8 p.m. He is described as "relationship technology made user friendly." Author of "The Mini-Manual for the Ordinary Marriage," Hughes has appeared on Caroline's Comedy Hour on A&E Network and the Showtime Comedy Club Network.

Hypnotist/comedian Tom DeLuca, Aug. 19, Brockbridge Auditorium, 8 p.m. Twice named the College Entertainer of the Year by the National Association for Campus Activities (NACA), he combines the power of suggestion with audience participation to present a show that is entertaining for all age groups.

Comedian Peter Berman, Aug. 24, Button Auditorium, 9:15 p.m. His show is described as providing "a thrill-a-minute."

Comedian/musician Kier, Aug. 31, Button Auditorium, 7:30 p.m. The 1993 NACA Coffeehouse Entertainer of the Year, he has played thousands of colleges and clubs and is known for his impressions of such rock stars as Bob Dylan, Talking Heads, Billy Joel and U2.

And, students at MSU will have other opportunities for extracurricular activities throughout the year. Attending football, men's and women's basketball and volleyball games, theatre productions and openings for art exhibits are available at no charge to those with a valid I.D. card. For the athlete, a number of intramural sports hold competitions on a regular basis.

To ease the stress for the commuter student, two new daytime parking lots will be opened by the time the fall term arrives. Located on the south side of the U.S. 60 Bypass, the lots will be serviced by a shuttle bus from 7:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., weekdays. The new lot across from the AAC will be used for evening sporting events and concerts. The parking fee is $15 for the new lots.

MSU began the new fiscal year in July with a structural reorganization, designed to streamline programs and services, and some new leaders will be at the helm in some areas when students return in the fall.

Dr. Gerald DeMoss is the interim dean of the College of Sciences and Technology (formerly Applied Sciences and Technology), which houses these departments:

Agricultural Sciences (formerly Agriculture and Natural Resources) with Dr. Judy Willard continuing as chair through the fall semester; Biological and Environmental Sciences with Dr. DeMoss as chair; Human Sciences (formerly Home Economics) with Dr. Marilyn Sampley as chair; Industrial Education and Technology with newly-named chair Dr. Charles E. Coddington.

Mathematical Sciences with Dr. Roger Hammons as chair; Nursing and Allied Health Sciences with Dr. Linda Salyer as chair; Physical Sciences with Dr. Ronald Fiel continuing as chair through the fall semester, and Dr. Dudley Herron assuming that post on Jan. 3.

Dr. John Kleber, professor of history, will serve as the interim dean of the College of Humanities (formerly College of Arts and Sciences). The college is comprised of these departments:

Art with Tom Sternal as chair; Communications with Dr. Larry

Albert continuing as chair until a new chair is found; English, Foreign Language and Philosophy with Dr. Mark Minor its newly-named chair; Geography, Government and History with Dr. Ron Michelson as chair, and Music with Dr. Chris Gallabier as chair.

Heading the College of Business as interim dean for the coming year will be Beverly McCormick.

The College of Education and Behavioral Sciences will have two new chairs: Dr. Jack C. Sheltman will head the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation, beginning Sept. 13, and Maj. Ralph E. Shofa joined the Department of Military Science in July.

The University will continue to assist the Kentucky Education Reform Act in fulfilling its goals. A campuswide KERA conference update will be held Friday, Aug. 27.

New this fall is a two-day orientation program for faculty who have recently come on board. In addition to a campus session, the agenda includes a tour of a portion of MSU's service region.

Plans are being finalized now for other programs to be held later this academic term. Among these are: Parents Weekend, Sept. 17-19, and Homecoming, Oct. 22-24.

Two make Merit finals

Two Floyd County high school seniors have achieved one of the highest academic honors in the National Merit Program. Heather Watson of Allen Central and Lisa Hobson of McDowell have been named National Merit Finalists by the National Merit Corporation in Evanston, Illinois.

"It is an honor for a school system the size of Floyd County to have two National Merit Finalists," said Superintendent Dr. Stephen Towler. "We are very proud of these two young ladies for their academic accomplishments and all around hard work. Their talents for their communities and all of Floyd County should take pride in their excellent attitudes and performance."

"Of all the different testing measures, the National Merit Test is regarded as the benchmark of high achievement," added Towler. "This distinction in recognizing national students as a key indication of student achievement is a very important term in the National Merit Program."

Watson to compete for monetary awards. Approximately 6,000 scholars will be awarded in finalists in April and May.

Floyd County has had a National Merit finalist before, but Assistant Superintendent for Instruction Gary Frazier said he cannot remember the county ever having two finalists in the same year.

Lisa Denese Hobson, 17, is the daughter of Michael and Cora Hobson. The McDowell High School senior is from a 4.2 GPA. Hobson has racked up dozens of awards in academics, while participating in numerous clubs and sports. She was a 1992 Governor's Cup finalist.

A 1993 Governor's Cup finalist, she was a 1992 Governor's Cup finalist in general knowledge, social studies and quick recall. Jenny Wilkey, a 1993 Governor's Cup finalist, was a 1992 Governor's Cup finalist in general knowledge, social studies and quick recall.

ever National Merit finalist from Allen Central High School. Watson has earned numerous honors during her high school years. She recently represented Regions 9, 10, 14 and 16 in the "Sweet 16" Academic Showcase at Pennsylvania State University. She was one of 16 students selected statewide to compete in the final competition in Journalism/feature writing.

This year is the fourth time Watson has earned a trip to the Kentucky Academic Association's Governor's Cup state finals in the language arts category. She also advanced through regional competition in German to compete in the state Foreign Language Festival for prose reading and literary recitation.

Also on a state level, Watson represented her school as a 10th grader in the 1991 High School Leadership Seminar in the 1992 Governor's Cup state finals in the language arts category. She was a 1992 Governor's Cup finalist in general knowledge, social studies and quick recall.

Eight are Governor's Scholars

Eight Floyd County high school juniors—five from Betsy Layne and three from Prestonsburg—have been selected to participate in the 1993 Kentucky Governor's Scholars Program.

The Governor's Scholars summer program will provide 700 students from around the state the opportunity to learn during five intensive weeks at Centre College and Northern Kentucky University. Selection to the program is extremely competitive, and there are strict admission criteria.

The Governor's Scholars Program began in 1983. The program was created to motivate and empower our brightest young people to become effective citizens who have a sense of responsibility and a commitment to the state and a mind for innovation.

Students selected to attend the program without a charge. The program is a joint effort of the Kentucky Department of Education and the Kentucky State Office of the Governor.

The FPS team members are Ryan Sexton, Nick Sammons, Stephanie Owens, Jessica Granham, Nick Mar. Individual honors went to the following team members: Jessica Slove, first place in mathematics; third, Howard, third place in mathematics; and fourth in social studies; and Hannah Melburn, third place in language.

Positive attitudes at work

Harold School may not look like one of Kentucky's best schools. But that is exactly what it is. Located within a few feet of busy U.S. 23, the small school has no library, no science lab, no band room and no gymnasium. The Floyd County Schools Local Planning Committee recently characterized the school's physical plant as "tiny, much too close to the highway, and in the flood plain; building is not good, and too small to be workable."

But the staff, parents and students have proven that the school's attitude is the key to its success. "We are a positive attitude school," said Sarah Barker, a teacher at the school. "We are a school where the formula for success is: work hard, be positive, and be a team player."

Harold ranked number six among the state's middle schools when the Department of Education released its line-item scores on tests to measure academic levels at 1,400 Kentucky schools. But number six is not even Harold's top statewide ranking.

"Two years ago, if Harold School's test scores had been pulled out of the state, we would have ranked second in the entire state," said Barker.

Harold's success is the result of a positive attitude, according to Barker. "We are a school where the formula for success is: work hard, be positive, and be a team player."

PHS student to compete in Kentucky Citizen Bee

An anticipated 20 high school students from across Kentucky will gather at the Student Center Theater at the University of Kentucky to participate in the Kentucky State Citizen Bee competition, Saturday, April 17, at 9:45 a.m.

Prestonsburg High School student Stewart B. Robertson will be among the students participating in the competition. The students were selected through regional competitions held throughout the state last month.

The Citizen Bee, patterned after a spelling bee and sponsored by the Close Up Foundation in Washington, D.C., will place the students in several rounds of written and oral questions. Students will be asked to answer questions on a variety of topics, including current events, history, and science.

Allen Central High School students vie for state honors

Half of the students who will compete in the state finals of the 1993 Sweet 16 Academic Showcase have been determined with the completion of the second regional competition held recently at Morehead State University. Two Floyd County students have earned a chance to compete in the finals.

Heather Watson and Charles Compton, both students at Allen Central High School, brought home second and third place honors at the regional competition. Watson was awarded second place in the Journalism/Feature Writing Category and Compton received second place in the Dimensional Category.

A total of 1,523 students from 190 high schools in 100 Kentucky counties have registered statewide to compete in the 1993 Sweet 16 Academic Showcase.

The first regional competition was held at Eastern Kentucky University on January 23. The competition will be held at Morehead State University in February. The state finals will be held at the University of Kentucky in Lexington on March 17-20.

Outstanding attendance

Five students were honored at the July Floyd County Board of Education meeting for their outstanding attendance. All five students attended school at least four years in a row without absence, and two of the students attended 13 years straight without missing a day of school. Board Chairman Ed Patton Jr. presented the students with a plaque. The board also passed a resolution honoring the students. Honored for perfect attendance were: Michael Grover Ousey of Allen Central High School (four years, 700 days); Lore Smallwood of Wheelwright High School (four years, 700 days); Robin Kidd of Harold Elementary (nine years, 1,575 days); Myra Lynn Patton of Allen Central High School (13 years, 2,275 days) and John Chester Goble II of Prestonsburg High School (13 years, 2,275 days). Goble was not present when the photo was taken.

Regional campus award program helps students return to school

The 1993-94 academic year for students at Morehead State University's Big Sandy Extended Campus Center begins with registration on Thursday, Aug. 19, from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., with classes beginning the following Monday, Aug. 23.

For those planning to enroll, there is a wide variety of offerings from which to choose as nearly 70 courses are on the schedule. Students may pick from classes in the fields of business, education, science, English, history, geography, government and art to special courses designed for registered nurses pursuing a B.S.N. degree.

While the schedule includes a number of morning, afternoon and evening courses, there is also a new special weekend graduate course for teachers/administrators designed to provide insight into using computers for instructional and administrative purposes.

In addition, the Big Sandy ECC is one of two off-campus sites for a special graduate management class offered through distance learning by interactive computer and voice communication integrated with videotape. The instructor, Dr. Roger D. Carlson, MSU professor of marketing, will rotate his teaching site from the main campus to the Big Sandy and the Ashland Area centers.

The fall semester also brings another resident faculty member to the center to teach in the elementary education program. Joining Dr. David Peterson, assistant professor of education, will be Dr. G. Michael Miller, also an assistant professor of education. Dr. Miller, who earned an Ed.D. degree in reading education from the University of Georgia, previously taught at the University of Rio Grande in Rio Grande, Ohio.

"Adding Dr. Miller, who becomes our second resident faculty member, is going to allow us to greatly enhance the elementary education program," said Dr. Margaret Lewis, director of the Big Sandy ECC.

"The growth at the Big Sandy ECC has been tremendous and as a result we've almost doubled our course offerings from last fall," Dr. Lewis added.

Students enrolling for the first time at the center are encouraged to ask about a special financial aid program, designed to assist students in taking the first step back into the classroom. Known as "Regional Campus Awards," the program offers a one-time $300 award which will cover tuition for a three-hour course at the undergraduate level, plus books and some miscellaneous expenses.

Students planning to transfer into the center from other schools will find the process streamlined with the addition of a computer program which not only determines what courses are transferable to MSU, but also will show what additional work is needed to complete a degree.

Working with the students in addition to Dr. Lewis and faculty members, is Lebra Salyer, academic/student services coordinator. Salyer splits her time between the Big Sandy and the Ashland Area centers.

Local teachers work to improve education in Floyd County

Floyd County's teachers have been working hard over the short summer to improve their understanding of the Kentucky Education Reform Act.

At one recent week-long workshop at the Morehead State University Big Sandy Campus, several teachers worked to align the curriculum with the 72 goals of KERA.

Roy Johnson, a teacher at Stumbo Elementary, said the workshop was a success.

"I think we've learned more about KERA by doing this," said Johnson. "We've worked well as a group, had a wide variety of input from a lot of different people."

One teacher said it was high time teachers are involved in the development of curriculum.

"At last, we're making a step in the right direction," said Patricia Murphy, a teacher at Allen Central High School and president of the Floyd County Education Association. "We are looking at the curriculum framework and getting it back to the teachers' level."

The teachers broke off into three groups — K-4, middle grades and high school. From those divisions, sub-groups worked on specific subjects.

Toni Wicker-Howard, a former teacher and the district's new special education consultant, worked with the K-4 group. Wicker-Howard said the teachers seemed eager to take advantage of the opportunity to help align the new curriculum framework.

"We hope the teachers can take this information back to the schools to share with their colleagues. It is knowledge they will be able to apply," said Wicker-Howard. "It is nice to work as a team to develop ideas."

Phil Paige, director of professional development for the Floyd County Schools, said the teachers worked hard at the session to help improve education in Floyd County.

"I'm very enthusiastic about the results we will see from this workshop," said Paige. "Our teachers are working long hours to understand and implement KERA. I think this curriculum workshop is a great step toward implementation of outcome-based education."

Proportion of 1992 high school grads enrolled in college at all-time high

The U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics reported that the proportion of the most recent high school graduates who were enrolled in colleges or universities in the fall of 1992 equaled the all-time high of 62 percent set previously in 1980. About half of the most recent high school graduates had enrolled in college by the fall.

This information comes from the Current Population Survey, an annual nationwide survey of about 60,000 households conducted for BLS by the Bureau of the Census. Each October, this survey includes special questions on the school enrollment and high school graduation status of youth.

RECENT HIGH SCHOOL GRADUATES AND DROPOUTS

Young women continued to be more likely than young men to enter colleges or universities in 1992—64 versus 60 percent. There also continued to be wide gaps in the college enrollment rates by race and ethnic groups. Whereas 63 percent of the white high school graduates entered college, the enrollment rates for black and Hispanic youth were much lower—48 and 55 percent, respectively.

The majority of the 1992 college freshmen (63 percent) were enrolled in 4-year institutions. Among these students, about two-fifths were commuting school with some labor force activity. Among the youth enrolled in 2-year colleges, the proportion in the labor force was much higher—two-thirds.

The labor force participation rate was higher—78 percent—among the high school graduates who had not enrolled in college. The unemployment rate for this group, at 19.4 percent, was well below the jobless rate for 1991 graduates, which, at 25.3 percent, was the group's highest in 8 years.

School dropouts have always experienced greater labor market difficulties than persons with higher levels of education, and 1992 was no exception. Of the 400,000 youth who had dropped out of high school between October 1991 and 1992, only about 60 percent were in the labor force. Their unemployment rate of 39.1 percent was double the rate for the year's high school graduates who did not go on to college.

Of all the youth 16 to 24 years old (31 million), about half were enrolled in school in October 1992: 7.3 million in high school and 8.5 million in college. Over 80 percent of the college students were enrolled full-time, and 52 percent of them were in the labor force. Among part-time college students, 9 out of 10 were in the labor force.

The unemployment rate for college students was 8.1 percent in October. The rate for full-time students was 5.3 percent, compared with 7.2 percent for those attending college part time.

About 38 percent of high school students engaged in some labor force activity in October, and their jobless rate was 22.2 percent. Unemployment rates for black (46.8 percent) and Hispanic (34.7 percent) students were much higher than for whites (18.7 percent).

OUT-OF-SCHOOL YOUTH
A total of 15.1 million youth age 16 to 24 were not enrolled in school in October 1992, and slightly more than 80 percent of them were in the labor force. About 9 out of 10 men and 7 out of 10 women not enrolled in school were in the labor force.

The labor market success of out-of-school youth, as measured by the unemployment rate, is linked directly to the level of education they have completed. High school dropouts had by far the highest jobless rates, while those who had attended or graduated from college had the lowest rates. As was true among students, jobless rates for black and Hispanic out-of-school youth were higher than those for whites in October.

Kentucky Power charts education group

Kentucky Power Company has become a charter member of an organization formed to improve schools. "Education Initiative: EEI 2000" is the Edison Electric Institute—an industry association which represents electric utilities across the country.

EEI's effort encourages its member companies to work with educators, communities and other businesses to restructure primary and secondary education to achieve world-class education.

"EEI member companies have been implementing effective education and community outreach programs for decades," says Thomas R. Kuhn, EEI president. "Now it is important that we, as an industry, join together and help each other, our employees and the communities we serve to improve our education and economic prospects by networking on the national level through EEI 2000."

According to Kentucky Power President G. R. Bork, EEI "is an increasingly important world economy, including could be more important to our nation's prospects than a well-educated citizenry."

Kentucky Power Company is prepared to help meet the challenge inherent in that statement, Boyle says, recognizing that a well-educated community improves the quality of life in the company's service territory.

Financial contributions are an example of the company's commitment to education, Boyle adds. "About 10 percent of Kentucky Power's contribution funds go to educational programs," he says.

But, other community activities such as speakers bureau programs that fit a variety of age groups, field trips in education and student tours of company facilities support educational efforts as well. And the company actively supports the initiative to make the Kentucky Education Reform Act Education and Junior Achievement to strengthen education in Eastern Kentucky.

Perhaps the most far-reaching effect on education the company has realized through its employees who get involved in their local school systems, Boyle says. "We have a number of employees who work with schools and various educational programs like this year's Week of the Young Child celebration in Ashland."

Area Education Projects—an organization which provides funding for special school projects—and Tech Prep—designed to provide students with the skills and disciplines necessary to enter an increasingly technical job market.

EEI seeks widespread adoption of The National Education Goals set forth by the 50 state governors and the president of the U.S. The six goals for the year 2000 are: (1) All children in America will start school ready to learn. (2) The high school graduation rate will increase to at least 90 percent. (3) American students will be competitive in the core subjects. (4) U.S. students will be first in the world in science and mathematics achievement. (5) Every adult American will be literate and possess the skills necessary to compete in a world economy. (6) Every school in America will be safe and free of drugs.

Handling back-to-school easier equipped with the basics

Teenage fads and fashions have come and gone. In the '80s, teens were wearing poodle skirts and "rocking around the clock." The dyed T-shirts and flower children symbolized the free spirit of '70s. These and other fads have come and gone, but the basics of school supplies have remained the same.

And in '93, the overall fashion theme of "back to the basics" was reflected in the latest trends in school supplies. Simply put, students this fall are going back to school well-equipped with the basics.

This back-to-school season, older students will be seen walking through the hallways carrying school supplies in deep colors with understated patterns and sophisticated designs.

"Today's older students are conscious of the fact that trends pass and have a short lifespan," says Mark Rexroat of Mead School and Office Products. "Therefore, they are now looking for products such as our Fine Star® line, which features durable covers, boxes and folders that last."

pockets with traditional designs and colors."

Their younger siblings, however, still find appeal in upbeat school supplies with aggressive designs and bright colors.

"It's all about bright, vivid images and colors, such as our No! Rules® line, appeal to younger students who are in search of their own identity," says Rexroat.

To make sure your kids have the basics, check out the following tips on what's hot and what's not this fall in school supplies.

Keep kids fit throughout the school year

Now that summer's over, how do kids stay fit throughout the school year? The responsibility, experts say, lies with both schools and parents. "To motivate children and keep them in shape, physical education curricula should promote and reward health-related fitness traits such as muscle strength and endurance, aerobic capacity and body composition (percentage of lean to fat)," says Charles Stirling, Ed.D., executive director of the Cooper Institute for Aerobics Research in Dallas. "There are areas where all kids can succeed regardless of athletic ability."

As an example, Stirling points to the Prudential FITNESSGRAM, a scientifically-based physical fitness conditioning, testing and reporting system administered by the non-profit Cooper Institute and used by more than 3,000 schools across the country.

"This is a program designed to teach self-motivated fitness habits. It uses personalized report cards that provide objective measures of fitness, adjusted to account for age and sex. Unlike traditional fitness programs that compare kids to one another, the report cards relate students' fitness levels to national health fitness standards and past performances," explains Stirling.

THE FITNESSGRAM was years in development and is continually updated to reflect new research in the field of child and teen health and fitness. Sponsorship by The Prudential makes it affordable to every school. But schools can't do it alone. According to a report published in the American Journal of Preventive Medicine, "If one parent in a family participates in a health-related fitness program, the child's physical activity level increases by 20 percent." One of the major contributions a parent can make is the report, providing information and transportation to physical education and after school activity. Parents also determine how much time children spend outdoors, a factor that strongly impacts kids' fitness levels, the report says.

The Journal of Pediatrics takes parental influence a step further. According to a study reported earlier this year, children of physicians are twice as likely to be active as those of inactive mothers. Kids with fit fathers are 3.5 times more active, and those with both parents physically active are 5.6 times more likely to be active and better physically fit themselves.

KERA the foundation for 'new beginning' in public education

by Gary Dodd
General Manager,
Administration and Planning
Reprinted from Leadership Kentucky

From the beginning, America has had a love affair with education. Throughout our history the citizens of this country have understood that democracy and formal learning are inextricably interlocked, and the building of this amazing network of public schools has been one of America's most spectacular achievements. All of it accomplished not by a national directive, but by local citizens committed to having a system of common schools for the common good.

Education has always been a cooperative effort; schools have been successful precisely because they had a wide base of support. In the early days children often served as apprentices to local craftsmen. In colonial America, spiritual leaders were considered teachers of morality, and in most families it was the responsibility of older children to help educate their younger siblings. Parents were the first and most essential teachers.

But gradually the partnership weakened. Families no longer worked together. Apprenticeships were abolished. Older children became involved in other endeavors. The influence of spiritual leaders diminished. Neighbors became strangers to one another. Increasingly, the school became an isolated, disconnected institution, without the essential network of support.

Today, we hear so much about how the public schools have failed. And, certainly, education must improve. But perhaps it's not the school that has failed. Perhaps it's the partnership that has failed.

The most urgent task confronting our generation is re-creating public education and rebuilding the partnership between the nation's schools and the communities they serve.

This is exactly what KERA is all about. KERA lays the foundation for a new beginning for our public schools, and for our children. The law recognizes that public education involves shared responsibilities among government, business, local communities, parents, and learners of all ages. All of the components of KERA are connected to one another, with the learner at the center of it all. Every program is designed to support and enhance the learner's ability to become a useful and productive member of society.

Student Performance Outcomes—KERA establishes learning goals for all learners, and requires schools to help them succeed.

Accountability—The law holds educators accountable for learners' success. Significant consequences, including monetary rewards and the possibility of dismissal, are established for educators.

Student Performance Assessments are being created to determine if learners are successful. They are performance-based; they measure learners' abilities to use the knowledge and skills they have gained, rather than their ability to choose one of four possible answers in a paper-and-pencil test.

School-based decision making—Since educators face significant consequences, they are given the authority to decide how best to help students learn. Parents are included on the school councils.

Professional Development—Funds for professional development have been increased to help teachers prepare for the changes in the law and to learn how to better guide the learning process.

Preschool Programs—Four-year-olds at risk of education failure are given an opportunity to become better prepared for school. Parent involvement is an important aspect of the program.

Primary School Program—The new education system replaces kindergarten through third grade with an undivided primary school program, which allows children to progress at their own pace without the stigma of failure. They will move to the fourth grade when they have mastered the skills needed to be successful there.

Extended School Services—Schools provide extra instructional time before school, after school, weekends, or during the summer.

Teach your child to guess

Estimating is a skill so necessary, many of us don't even think about how often we use it. It's merely second nature.

But children need to be encouraged to develop estimating skills above and beyond what estimating they learn in their regular mathematics classes, according to the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics (NCTM).

"It takes skill for a child even to differentiate between the need for an exact answer and the need for an estimate," says Dr. Mary Lindquist, NCTM president. "This is especially difficult when children are first learning exact numbers."

Don't wait until your child has mastered computation to begin teaching estimations, because estimating takes time to learn, advises Lindquist.

Before children count, they can estimate how much cereal will fit in a bowl, how much sand in a pail, how far to jump over an obstacle and how many crayons will fit in a box.

Everyday experiences such as shopping or reading a newspaper lend themselves to estimating. You can involve your children in these experiences by comparing the savings from different boxes of cereal or calculating annual wages for jobs listed in classified ads.

As you teach estimating, however, make sure your child knows that estimating is a guess based on facts, not just a wild guess plucked out of the air. You can enhance your child's estimation skills by discussing the way in which he or she made a decision to determine if they're doing it correctly.

Encourage youngster's math skills

Children love to count and they use counting numerous ways. According to the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics (NCTM), by the time children enter kindergarten they have developed many practical, but informal, math skills.

As you work to encourage your child's math skills, keep in mind that patience, understanding and positive reinforcement are the keys to your child's mathematical development.

It's good to ask your children to describe how they worked out a math problem rather than simply accept the answer as right or wrong, according to NCTM.

If a child consistently makes subtraction errors that you aren't sure result from carelessness or misunderstanding, work out the answers with them. Try placing marbles in a jar and asking that a specific number of marbles be removed.

Work with your child's teacher so your help out of school will reinforce what is taught in school.

For a free brochure, "Help Your Child Learn Math," send a self-addressed, stamped, business-size envelope to NCTM, 1906 Association Drive, Dept NU, Reston, VA 22091.

Planning right ensures 'all smiles' for back-to-school

Picking a school for your child? Public? Private? Alternative? Specialist? Considering a different school this back-to-school season? As a parent, you do have a choice among schools. The options depend on your child, as well as different enrollment policies adopted by different school districts.

Your child is a product of his or her environment, and relationships formed with teachers and peers will matter more than even the most extensive curriculum or elaborate learning facility.

According to Your Growing Child by Penelope Leach (Alfred A. Knopf), no school's local reputation is to be relied upon, since both overall atmosphere and academic performance can change rapidly in response to changes in faculty or student enrollment. Here is a list of guidelines for parents in search of the perfect school:

• See every prospective school for yourself during a working school day. Don't base your decision just upon a guided tour of the school's newest facilities. Visit classrooms, gym, cafeteria; try to see children working, playing, talking, eating. The attitude of the faculty toward school and pupils is especially important.

• Talk to other parents and students. Get them to describe the school's strengths and weaknesses, even though they may not want the same thing as you from the school.

• Discuss with your child what he or she wants from the school. A younger child, of course, may not grasp the seriousness or importance of such matters, but an older child will usually feel stronger about special points—faculty, classmates, facilities.

• Make your next visit armed with questions for the principal. He or she should be equipped and knowledgeable enough to advise you on anything you want to know—school's internal workings, performance in various spheres, disciplinary policies and problems, and future plans. Ask questions that extract specific and factual answers rather than meaningless generalities.

• To avoid confusion, sometimes it's helpful to write down pros and cons to all your researches, especially if considering several schools.

Children need

All their shots while they're tots readily available immunizations. If a child doesn't receive immunizations as soon as they should—more than half of the preschool children in some urban areas lack protection. And these childhood diseases can result in chronic disability, disfigurement, and even death.

What this means is simple and tragic. Children are suffering and sometimes dying from preventable diseases. The cost to the health care system is also high. If thousands of children who should be vaccinated are not, the cost to the health care system is even higher.

Over seventy-five years of community service

Children can't get themselves immunized. Only parents can ensure that youngsters are protected against preventable childhood diseases. If you have a preschool child, please contact your physician or local health clinic. Have your child fully immunized by age 2, and support immunization programs in your community through your business, school, or club. Let's make sure that America's children get all their shots, while they're tots.
